The Changing Ocean This Modern Ship Safety and Speed Have You Had Hay Fever?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.

On Board Steamship Normandie, June 22—No matter how often you cross this Atlantic ocean, or the North American continent, the crossing is always different and interesting. The ocean, like the wide plains, is forever changing.

Two days ago the waves looked like pinythings for children. Last night the ocean changed its mind and rolled the waves up high with a shrieking wind. The steward said, "We shall have to fasten the arm chairs tomorrow," but the heavy ship paid no attention to the waves. The ocean changed its mind again and calmed down.

It used to be said "time passes." Then more wisely it was said that men pass, time remains. Once the ships used to roll, now the ocean rolls. The ship remains steady. Recently this writer crossed and recrossed the continent by air, leaving Newark in the late afternoon; breakfast at San Francisco next morning at twenty past eight o'clock. A few years, perhaps months only, and virtually all ocean crossing will be by air.

The newspaper printed on board says England is preparing to build a second Queen Mary.

Better start earth's biggest airship. The other may be out of date when finished.

This ship would interest boys that know the sea only from Captain Marryat or other old writers. The sailor in the crow's nest climbs no rigging. He goes up a ladder inside the steel mast. Four other men, two officers and two seamen, watch the ocean ahead of the racing ship constantly, night and day, looking out for ships.

The ship's hundred and sixty thousand horsepower engines are controlled by a tiny electric steering wheel a few inches in diameter. A baby could steer it if he knew how. The helmsman works only one hour. That is enough for concentrated attention.

French and English ships go by different sea lanes sixty miles apart by agreement to avoid possibility of collision.

A speedometer, telling how fast the ship moves, is operated by a mechanism below the keel that records the speed of the rushing waters. Burning oil produces steam; steam power is converted into electric power, and that drives the ship. The captain always knows how deep the ocean is beneath him, an electric contrivance sends a sound wave down through the water to the bottom, which sends back an echo.

Knowing the speed at which sound travels through water, it is easy to calculate the depth. The machine does it for you. It is a feeble sound, one hundred and sixty thousand vibrations to the second. No human ear could pick it up, but the machine records it. Twenty-five thousand vibrations per second is the limit of your ear, and that is not bad for a primitive contrivance like a human being.

In mid-afternoon loud speakers, roaring through every part of the vessel, announce a life boat drill. Presently come five long mournful blasts from the ship's fog horn and siren combined. A bull or Bashan accompanied by a banshee could not sound more dreary. The fog horn shakes the ship; the siren screeches.

It is only a harmless drill for the passengers' protection, but imagination is stronger than fact and you almost wish the drill could wait until you are nearer shore. Right in the middle of the ocean, with the water a mile or two deep, would be a poor place to start swimming.

This is really news — good news. St. George's Hospital, London, announces a treatment for hay fever, successful in 99 per cent of cases over five years of experiment.

The remedy involves "application by electricity of a coating of ionized zinc to the inside of the nostrils. After three or four applications the majority of patients are free from attacks of ordinary hay fever for a year. Precautionary applications are given at the end of the year and again a year later. Thereafter there is usually no recurrence of the trouble."

Only those that have suffered the torments of hay fever know what this remedy will mean. Others will wonder about the effect of permanently coating the mucous membrane of the nostrils with ionized zinc. It might mean closing the pores and preventing normal secretions. Your doctor will tell you about that.

FISTS FLY IN STATE HOUSE BATTLE

So. Boston Bathers Hit 'Dress' Edict

O'REILLY RULE PROTESTED TO MAYOR

A new Park Department rule, requiring applicants for lockers at the Columbus Park bathhouse, to be fully dressed — even to neckties — evoked a loud chorus of protest today from indignant citizens.

The new rule was put into effect without warning, to the dismay of scores of would-be bathers who had thronged to the bathhouse.

Most of these men and youths were from South Boston.

The Columbus Park bathhouse is situated at the broad curve of sand known popularly as Carson Beach favorite spot for tousands in warm weather.

DORCHESTER JOINS

Dorchester residents joined with South Bostonites in denouncing the Park Department's action.

Protests to the Park Department were in all cases turned over to Superintendent of Baths James E. O'Reilly, but petitions were put in circulation this afternoon demanding redress from Mayor Mansfield and Park Commissioner William P. Long.

DRESSED UP ADULTS

The petitio. set forth that, if a well-dressed stranger appears at the bathhouse, he is invited into the adult male ion with its excellent lockers.

But if an adult male appears minus coat or necktie, he is invited to go over to the boys' side and compete with hundreds of boys for the 850 cubicles into which clothes can be stowed if rolled up in a tight ball.

O'Reilly's ruling is that the adult section is for persons "fully-clothed," and any male who shows up in a polo shirt, slacks, sneakers and such will just have to go in with the boys.

Superintendent O'Reilly said furthermore that he had to do something about the situation because there are only 439 lockers in the men's section, while there are 850 in the boys' division.

REP. COYNE HIT IN FIGHT ON HILL

Flying fists caused an uproar on the third floor of the State House today.

Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester, a George McCarthy and a third man whose name was not obtained furnished the excitement.

The blows developed during an argument between Representative Coyne and McCarthy over a legislative matter.

State House guards, who arrived after the affray had been halted by onlookers, were told that the unnamed man stepped in and struck McCarthy with a hard right.

McCarthy was "Exhibit A" to such testimony when he appeared at the surgeon general's office to be treated for a laceration of his cheek.

BONUS CHECKS SENT 21,000

More than 40,000 veterans will have their bonus checks by tonight.

Besides 20,000 delivered up to Saturday night, 21,000 more were in the mails for delivery today.

Some veterans, especially in outlying sections, were complaining at the delay in receiving their checks, but officials in charge of the distribution at the federal building pointed to the immense volume of work, and the intricate detail in each case.

Officials expect that the end of this week will find all veterans who have decided to cash their bonds now, with their money in hand.

ELY IN DRIVE FOR LANDON; AL MAY AID

Westfield, June 22 — Former Democratic Governor Joseph B. Ely today announced that he would stump the New England states for the Republican nominee for President, Governor Alfred Mossman Landon.

Talking with a Boston Evening American reporter, the former Massachusetts governor said:

"Nobody has asked me yet to do any speaking for the Republican nominee, Governor Landon, but you can say I certainly shall. I will make a series of speeches in support of Landon."

He added that there will be at least three speeches and probably more.

SMITH TO TAKE STUMP

Ely's announcement was made shortly after reports emanated from New York that Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential candidate in 1928, had planned at least one speech for "the Coolidge of the West."

The New York Evening Journal stated today that "the former Governor's (Smith's) intention to stump for the G. O. P. nominee for the presidency is as certain as anything can be in politics."

The Journal expressed the opinion that Smith would wait several weeks or perhaps until mid-October, when the presidential fight is at fever heat, before publicly announcing his opposition to Roosevelt's policies would assume the form of an active campaign to support the Republican candidate.

Smith's Plea

Democrats Told to 'Be American'

New York, June 22—The text of the statements to the Democratic party issued by Alfred E. Smith, Bainbridge Colby, James A. Reed, Joseph B. Ely, and Daniel F. Cohalan, follows:

"To the delegates to the national Democratic convention of 1936:

"As men who believe in the principles, teachings and traditions of the Democratic party, as they were personified by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland, we urge you, who meet in the name of the party made glorious in the minds of patriotic Americans by the records of these men, to emulate their examples and do in the present grave crisis confronting our country what these great leaders would have done under such conditions.

"Be American"

"We suggest to you, as all of these men were conspicuous for courage and character, that they would subordinate partisanship to patriotism; look with an eye single to the welfare of the country and its citizens; act in the manner best calculated to preserve the institutions under which we became the first nation of the world and gave to our citizens a measure of comfort and a standard of living wages incomparably higher than those enjoyed in any other land.

"We submit therefore that—if you are to continue to act under the name of the Democratic party—you must first be American rather than anything else; you must take the heavy hand of government off of business, to the end that the 18 or 19 millions of unemployed may again join the

DELEGATES POURING INTO 'PHILLY'

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, June 22 — Their harmony shattered—or at least dented—by Al Smith's unexpected blast against the national ticket, Democrats by the thousands rolled into Philadelphia today for their national convention, intent upon the renomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner.

Smith's appeal to the convention to cast aside Mr. Roosevelt and nominate "a genuine Democrat" fell on deaf ears so far as this convention was concerned.

The principal effect o Al's statement was to make the delegates boiling mad—a state of mind that will be demonstrated before the convention is many hours old.

Speeches were being revamped today to meet the Smith challenge. Senator Alben W. Barkley, temporary chairman and keynoter, will reply to the 1928 standard bearer tomorrow, and what he leaves unsaid will be sounded by Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas in his speech as permanent chairman on Wednesday.

'FOR LIBERTY LEAGUE'

For the time being, the Roosevelt-managed convention decided to leave the erstwhile "Happy Warrior" in the hands of the delegates.

Genial Jim Farley, its national chairman, who was taken aback by the suddeness and the savagery of the Smith attack, had recovered something of his usual aplumb today.

"I don't think," said Farley,

15 Escape Fumes In Somerville

Fifteen persons were forced to flee from an apartment house in Dimick street, Somerville, when fumes filled the building today.

Firemen called to the scene had to use gas-masks after the first few who tried to enter were driven out, choking.

DEMOCRAT DELEGATES ENTRAIN FOR PHILADELPHIA

On to Philadelphia go Democratic delegates, Democratic workers and friends. The Democratic Special left South Station at noon, carrying a portion of the Massachusetts Democracy. Toward the left of the picture you see Attorney General Paul A. Dever. At his right is Mrs. Clementina Langone, the first women of Italian extraction to be given honor of being made alternate to a national convention from this state. She is wife of State Senator Joseph A. Langone.

A pep talk by Joseph McGrath, chairman of the Democratic State Committee just before the special train pulled out of South Station. What a happy group of feminine Democratic workers were on that train! After all were supplied with tickets by Mrs. Margaret O'Rirodan, chairman of the women's division, the party took on a merry aspect. McGrath has a lot of spirited backing from these groups to put over the plan of the Massachusetts delegation.

LEHMAN RAPS SMITH PLEA

Philadelphia, June 22 (INS)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York, who was nominated for a second term by Alfred E. Smith, today denounced the Smith message to the Democratic National Convention urging that the delegates repudiate President Roosevelt.

Governor Lehman asserted that the plea for another candidate by Smith and four other prominent Democrats "represents the feelings of only a handful of Democrats. Mr. Lehman said:

"I have read the statement. I am confident that the views expressed by the five signers of the statement represent the feelings of only a handful of Democrats. The great rank and file of the party, as well as the majority of the independents of the country, stand foursquare behind the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

ranks of workers employed in the factories, industries and on the farms of the country; you must put in power men under American policies of government who will balance our budget and put an end to the series of deficits measured in billions, which the present administration has given us; you must have a government which will make and enforce laws that will keep the American market for the American industries and farms and not have them swamped by the goods and products of nations that are our industrial and farming rivals and competitors.

"In chasing the shadow of foreign markets we must not throw away the substance of the greatest market in the world—the domestic market of the United States of America.

"You must put an end to the orgy of spending our public funds and the creating of millions of additional tax eaters who are breaking the backs of the honest majority of our countrymen and women, who still toil and save as did their parents before them. You must do away with conditions under which twenty millions of Americans are on the dole, with nothing to hope for under present rulers except a continuance of that condition of semi-servitude.

"You must preserve the Constitution and under it the three separate, distinct and independent branches of government. To that end you must have a President who will remain within his own sphere of jurisdiction and not make the Congress into a rubber stamp or try to intimidate the judiciary into an endorsement of his efforts to turn our republic into a dictatorship on the European model or an Asiatic absolutism.

"Vote Buying"

"You must follow the advice and example of the great Presidents of the past and keep our country free from entangling alliances with Old World powers. You must insist upon a Chief Executive who will collect the monies due us from defaulting governments instead of encouraging by silence and otherwise a continuance of defaults.

"You must, above all, put an end to the campaign, now under full swing, to buy the Presidency by the misuse of funds—generously given by the people of the United States to alleviate want and distress, largely caused by the incompetence of public servants—and it there is no other way to do this, you must—during the continuance of such help to otherwise helpless millions of Americans—save the honor of the country by preventing the dispensers of these public funds from coercing the voters, for whom the money has been appropriated, not as a bribe, but as a national necessity.

"These are hard tasks even for men who are worthy of succession to the leadership of the Democratic party. They would necessarily involve the putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrats—of whom you will have so many on your list of delegates.

"Is it too much to expect, with the many patriotic men and women among you, that the convention will have the courage and character to do these things? You will have to do them if you are to show yourselves fit to follow in the footsteps of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland.

"The temptation to do otherwise may be great.

"But if you do not act as those men would have acted, you should put aside the name of the party, which you will have deserted, and adopt a name which will properly reflect the principles of a regimented state, as advocated in the so-called New Deal legislation.

Veiled Hint

"We hope for the best and call upon you to stand for Democratic principles so that the coming contest may be between two great American groups, which have honest differences of opinion, within the framework of the Constitution.

"If you do, you will deserve success and once—no matter what may be the outcome of the campaign, for in either case, American institutions will be safe.

"If you fail, then patriotic voters of all parties will know unhesitatingly to what standard they must rally in order to preserve the America of the great leaders of the past.

"We beg to subscribe ourselves as men who will remain faithful to Democratic ideals and traditions, as well as to our country.

SMITH'S PLEA TO 'DROP' ROOSEVELT SHATTERS CONVENTION HARMONY

"there is anything more I can say about the Smith statement than I have already said."

Previously he had asserted that Al was speaking for the American Liberty League, and he ventured the thought that all Democrats would appreciate that fact.

Asked point blank who was going to answer Smith on behalf of the Democrats, Farley grinned his usual grin and replied:

"I imagine there are plenty of Democrats, real Democrats, in this country who will be glad to re ply to Governor Smith."

RECEIVED BY NO ONE

"Democrats themselves, thousands of them," he added, "will take care of the situation, this is a Democratic convention, and everyone has a right to speak his mind."

The angle that "burned up" the arriving delegates was the manner in which the Smith attack was made. The blistering Smith attack was in the form of a public statement, addressed to the delegates to the national convention, but addressed to no one in particular.

Farley said he had received no telegram or letter, and diligent search failed to disclose anyone who had actually received a copy of Al's blast. The delegates got their information from the newspapers.

So impressed by this fact was Al Kennedy, a New York delegate from Queens, that he sent a telegram to Smith today, inviting him to appear before the convention and declare himself. This was hardly necessary, as Al is a delegate and has a place in the New York delegation.

ALL SET FOR "WALK"

Asked today if Smith would be accorded the platform if he wanted it, Farley grinned and said:

"Certainly, this is a Democratic convention. Governor Smith is a delegate. If the delegate from New York wishes to address the convention he will be accorded that privilege, just as any other delegate."

The betting was, however, that the brown derby would not appear in this convention. The belief was universal that Al has "spoken his piece" and prepared the way for the "walk" that he has threatened to take during the campaign.

That Smith will not support the Roosevelt-Garner ticket was accepted on all sides as a fact. Indeed, the New York Evening Journal printed a story that not only would he bolt the Democratic ticket, but would actively support on the platform the Landon-Knox Republican ticket.

In this administration-controlled convention, a majority of the delegates appeared unconcerned by the prospect of the one-time happy warrior being outside the breastworks. This was particularly noticeable in the delegations from the South and West.

"LET HIM BOLT"

"Let him bolt," was their collective comment. "Let him bolt—and so what?"

The delegates from the South and West appeared more concerned about the inroads that may be made by the Lemke-O'Brien third party ticket, which is frankly inflationary, and is supported by the followers of Father Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, and to a large extent by the Townsendites.

"WILL SATISFY ALL"

"This will be one of the greatest conventions ever held by our party," said Farley in assembling the national committee as the first actual meeting of the committee.

"I am sure every one will leave here satisfied with the deliberations and will leave determined to put forth every effort so that our candidates will be re-elected by the greatest majorities in history."

Roy Miller of Texas represented Vice-President John N. Garner, who is the state national committeeman.

Sedgwick Kistler of Pennsylvania, friend of ex-Governor Al Smith, was absent. He will be replaced on the new committe by Governor George H. Earle.

Without debate, Senator Alvin Barkley of Kentucky was selected as temporary chairman and keynoter.

Only three contests between delegations required action by the committee in making up the temporary roll of 1100 delegate votes.

They were from Minnesota, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone.

Two of the contests — those in Minnesota and Puerto Rico — are throw-backs to the Smith-Roosevelt pre-convention fight of four years ago. All factions, however, now are supporting President Roosevelt.

Governor Joseph B. Ely, national committeeman for Massachusetts—one of the five appealing to the convention to "stop Roosevelt"—was absent. His proxy was held by Dan O'Connell, secretary to Senator Marcus Coolidge.

Democrats in Desperate Fight to Hold Minnesota

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 22—A fight to link the Democratic party in Minnesota with Farmer-Laborites in an effort to win the state for President Roosevelt was waged before a contest sub-committee of the Democratic national committee today.

William Dempsey, speaking in behalf of the contesting Wolff faction delegates, declared that support of the Farmer-Laborites is vital to the party.

"If you can go into Nebraska and support Senator Norris, and into California and aid Senator Johnson, we feel justified in doing what we can to attract the liberal voters in Minnesota," he said.

He predicted the Democratic party will eventually absorb the Farmer-Labor party, "if it remains liberal."

"Republicans who supported Roosevelt four years ago are backsliding," Dempsey added.

"We will lose some Democrats. Now that Mr. Lemke has put a third party in the field it is more necessary than ever to get the liberal vote."

Demanding a divorce from the Farmer-Labor party, Rep. Elmer Ryan urged seating of 22 delegates of the Moonan-Ryan faction.

"We must fight as Democrats to get anywhere," he said.

The Moonan-Ryan faction has the spokesman said, refused to flirt with the Farmer-Labor party.

Two-Thirds Rule Headed for Discard

Philadelphia, June 22 (INS)—Although delegates from Dixie were protesting, the Democratic convention, which opens tomorrow, was all set to take their historic two-thirds rule away from them.

Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, who will be chairman of the rules committee, said the two-thirds rule would be abrogated "without question."

McGrath to Succeed Ely On National Committee

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Joseph McGrath, chairman of the Democratic state committee, will be elected Democratic national committeeman to succeed former Governor Joseph B. Ely, and Mrs. Elizabeth L. McNamara of Cambridge will be re-elected national committeewoman by the Massachusetts delegates to the Democratic national convention.

The delegation, augmented by those from Maine and New Hampshire, leaves today for the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

Former Governor Ely, one of the leading foes within his party to the policies of President Roosevelt and who is prepared to support the Republican presidential nominee in the event that the Democratic convention adopts a platform contrary to his principles, will not be in the convention party. Ely has been national committeeman for four years, accepting the position when every indication was that the important post would go to Governor's Councilor Daniel H. Coakley of Brighton. At that time, Coakley took the position that Ely was the right one he would give way to.

CURLEY HEADS GROUP

Mrs. McNamara is already in Philadelphia attending to the duties of her position. She became national committeewoman after Miss Mary Ward of Boston resigned following her appointment as immigration commissioner.

The Massachusetts delegation consists of 38 delegates and 38 alternates, eight delegates and eight alternates being at large. The group is headed by Governor Curley, Senators Walsh and Coolidge and Chairman McGrath.

Chief interest of the Massachusetts delegation centers in the platform to be adopted, the abrogation of the historic two-thirds nomination rule, and the spectacular acceptance speech which President Roosevelt will make next Saturday night in Philadelphia.

Some excitement is expected to develop over the stand taken by the anti-New Deal group headed by former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York. These prominent leaders of the party have already called upon the delegates to substitute "some genuine" Democrat for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

3D PARTY SPECULATION

Speculation is also rife over the threat to Democratic success in the November election through the formation of the Lemke-O'Brien third party movement.

It is apparent to the party leaders that a third party sponsored by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, and backed by the Townsendites and the share-the-wealth group, will hit the Democratic party hardest.

Democratic chieftains here expect that the party platform to be presented for adoption to the convention will be suggred off in an attempt to meet this threat.

to Roosevelt and the New Deal by prominent Democrats throughout Massachusetts who have previously declined to make any comment one way or the other because of fear of political repercussions.

The former Massachusetts governor, who announced his opposition to the New Deal policies long before formation of the Liberty League, said that he had nothing further to say other than the opinion voiced by Smith and himself in the message to delegates at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia.

The other signers of the message to the convention, the theme of which was, "put aside Roosevelt" were: Brainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson administration; former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, and former Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of New York.

Ely couldn't say just how early in the campaign he would start stumping for Landon but his attitude suggested he would be ready to enter the fight at the opening gun.

The first of the "Big Lina" politicians to voice sentiment opposing the New Deal following Ely's announcement was Francis X. Hurley, former state auditor on the Democratic ticket. He said:

"There is nothing political in this issue to fight Roosevelt. It had become a fight for fundamental Americanism. I know the Frankfurter group well. While I admire their ability as professors and teachers of the youth of this country I know they are not blessed with wisdom in politics and social economics."

LETTER Holds Feely CLUES

SENT HUSBAND ON DEATH DAY

Pittsburgh, June 22—A letter, literally from the grave, may shed new light on the tragic deaths of Mrs. Eleanor Feely and her two young children, authorities said today.

The note, which arrived at the Pottersville, N. J., camp of Professor Martin J. Feely, two hours after he left it, was penned by the young mother just before the tragedy.

She was the former Eleanor Buckley of Abington and Springfield, Mass., a graduate of Northeastern Law School. Her husband is a graduate of Springfield College, and is attached to the physical education department of the University of Pittsburgh.

Detectives said that the letter would reach here later today and would be opened by her husband. They hope its contents may dispel the mystery still shrouding the triple deaths.

The mother and her three-year-old daughter Janice and five-year-old son, Robert, were found in the nursery of their East End apartment shortly before midnight Wednesday.

Similar Case

The husband and the brothers of Mrs. Feely insist they do not believe she caused the tragedy.

The brothers, Robert Buckley, a radio station official of Newark, N. J., and Richard Buckley, an advertising man of Bronxville, N. Y., even suggested police study the similarity of the deaths and those of Mrs. Mary Louise Stewart and her three-year-old son a year ago in Wilkinsburg.

Mrs. Stewart was fatally stabbed in her home and her son was struck on the head and strangled, just as little Robert Feely was.

Investigators, however, were almost unanimous in their belief the comely instructor's wife suddenly went out of her mind, possibly due to the strain of nursing her son through an attack of scarlet fever while the husband was away at the camp, and killed the children and herself.

Knot Clue

They claimed to have satisfactorily answered one of the last contradictory clues to the theory — the fact the knots in the ropes which strangled the Feely family were "sailor knots," unlike the kind a woman would tie.

They discovered the mother had been knitting a sweater, using the identical "sailor knot."

It was a strange coincidence that Mrs. Stewart and her young son were found dead on June 18, 1935, one year to a day before the Feely tragedy was discovered.

Like Mrs. Feely, she had been stabbed in the temple and in the chest. Mrs. Feely's chest wound was not fatal, but Mrs. Stewart's was.

Mrs. Stewart's boy had been struck in the head and strangled with an electric light cord. Her husband, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, was missing and has not been found.

Shoplifter Exiled From All Stores

Boston department stores lose $350,000 to shoplifters annually, Judge James H. Devlin was told in municipal court today.

Thereupon the judge imposed one of the most unusual sentences on record as his part of what may be a new court system in such cases.

Judge Devlin ordered that the next time Mrs. Mary Goelen, 50, of Somerville even appears in a department store, she is to go to Sherborn reformatory for an indefinite term.

Mrs. Goelen had been convicted of larceny of a teapot, valued at $3.45 from a large Boston store on June 4.

Patrolman Joseph L. Murphy, head of the special downtown squad that wars against shoplifters, testified that this woman was in the habit of trying to get a cash refund after thefts. She had a long record, it was testified.

The stores are "looking to the courts for relief," Murphy told Judge Devlin.

Britain Probing Helgoland Forts

London, June 22 (AP) — The British government has instituted an inquiry into a reported refortification of Helgoland by Germany, Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons today:

"I have seen reports that Helgoland is being fortified in contravention of the Versailles treaty and I am making inquiries."

FUN TO WORK, ASSERTS MRS. VANDERBILT

(The second interview with the socially prominent William Henry Vanderbilt is printed today. The first was in the Boston Sunday Advertiser yesterday. The last will be in the Boston Evening American tomorrow. He's a candidate for the governorship of Rhode Island.)

Mrs. William Henry Vanderbilt, wife of the former State Senator who grew up to become potential timber for the governorship of Rhode Island, wears a sunflower.

It's the Kansas flower, dedicated presently to Governor Alfred M. Landon. Vanderbilt wears one, too.

Continuing her interview with the Boston Evening American, begun in the Boston Sunday Advertiser yesterday, Mrs. Vanderbilt said:

"I devote about four hours a day to reading up on the campaign and the political issues that are going to make the campaign.

Not Sacrifice

"I don't consider it a sacrifice. No expenditure of energy is too great for a wife who truly loves her husband and is truly interested in his future.

"She may be a society woman. Or she may not be!

"Bill and I live here in Rhode Island. We have our roots in Rhode Island. We are all-the-year-around residents because we can't think of a better place to live.

"Bill loves to swim, and to play with the kids. So do I."

Mrs. Vanderbilt went on:

"When I am not filing clippings for Bill, my chief pleasure is to go out for a swim with the kids. We go to a stream nearby."

Which happens to be true. The Vanderbilts are not given to Bailey's Beach, even though some of their equally famous kinsmen and kinswomen go there on sultry afternoons.

"Bill has a lot of things that people like, plus a touch of Dutch straightforwardness that some do not have. He's got everything that goes to make a GREAT governor, as contrasted with the qualities that go to make a GOOD governor."

Can a Vanderbilt start from scratch, or can't he?

Used Brake

Henry L. Menckken would say that 99 per cent of the citizens of this great republic would like to be Mayflower descendants, Sons of the American Revolution, or descendants of Dutch patrons.

And would resent the election of almost any of them to high public office.

Vanderbilt is in his middle thirties, a conciliatory sort of fellow, when his principles are not involved. He doesn't look for any special privileges in the election just ahead.

In tomorrow's interview, the Boston Evening American will go into his plans and views.

Reverting to the distaff side for the moment, let's get back to Mrs. Vanderbilt. She can remember a lot besides Teddy Roosevelt bouncing her on his knee.

As a growing girl, one of her jobs was to accompany her father, Everett Colby of New Jersey, to his political rallies. When he talked too long, she would wave her handkerchief in a subtle manner that would not be apparent to the other auditors, but would signal him that he had said enough.

"I never have to, with Bill," she told the Evening American.

"He wouldn't talk more than 25 minutes over the end of the world. Usually, they cheer and ask him to say more. But he doesn't respond. He says what's on his mind, and sits down."

In view of the fact this is mostly an interview with Mrs. Vanderbilt, it may not be quite fair to state "Bill" broke in at this point, to say "Long sermons never saved a soul."

Mrs. Vanderbilt has been particularly active in the woman's end of politics ever since she married William Henry Vanderbilt. She was representative for Portsmouth—the suburb where their farm is located—on the Women's Republican Club of Newport.

Later, she was elected head of the Women's Republican Club of Portsmouth and got 200 new members in the first three months which indicates how she feels about politics.

In concluding her interview with the Boston Evening American Mrs. Vanderbilt said:

"As to married women in politics, I feel pretty much the same as Mrs. Landon does.

"I think we should stay in the background and work behind the scenes. Unless our husbands are very dumb.

"And neither of us has a dumb husband.

(In the concluding instalment of the Vanderbilt interviews, printed tomorrow, the Evening American will set forth the views of Mr. Vanderbilt, socialite, and candidate for the governorship of Rhode Island.)

MRS. VANDERBILT MR. VANDERBILT

ELSIE VANDERBILT ANNE VANDERBILT PADDY VANDERBILT

In Rhode Island, the William Henry Vanderbilts are out to battle for the Republican nomination for the governorship. When you say the Vanderbilts—that is just what it means—for Mrs. William Henry Vanderbilt is doing a big job in aiding her husband attain the objective. Down at Portsmouth, R. I., this family group of the Vanderbilts was made on the lawn adjoining their home. The younger girls are twins. Elsie is being held by Mrs. Vanderbilt. Anne is being held by the former state senator. The older girl, just 11, is Paddy. And let us introduce you to one of the many pets the children have—Paul, the Scottie.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Here is a woman who devotes at least four hours daily to acquainting herself with the political situation of her state and nation in an effort to aid her husband's campaign. Delightful, smiling Mrs. William Henry Vanderbilt doesn't consider this a sacrifice.

War Plane Crashes Normandie's Deck

Gosport, Eng., June 22 (AP)—A Royal Air Force bombing plane crashed on the deck of the S.S. Normandie today. No one was hurt.

The freak accident occurred while the ship was in Cowes Roads, disembarking its passengers from New York.

The plane was being flown by Lieutenant G. K. Horsey.

As Horsey piloted the bomber over the big French liner, it struck the stay of a mast, then fell on the deck across the bows of the ocean vessel.

Boat Capsizes, 2 Boys Rescued

Two South Boston boys, John Sullivan, 14, East Fifth street, and Patrick Flanagan, 16, of East Seventh street, owe their lives today to coast guardsmen of the City Point station.

Hurled into harbor waters when their small sailboat capsized, the two lads were rescued by guardsmen in a speedboat.

BONUS AID LAUDED

Girl Writer's Directions 'Official'

War veterans who profited by following concise instructions for receiving their bonus bonds, certifying them and cashing them quickly, can thank Peggy Doyle of the Boston Evening American staff for the clear and unmistakable directions upon which they acted.

So excellently did Miss Doyle prepare these directions for this newspaper, after a long and close study of the bonus ramifications, that Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague paid her the unusual tribute of adopting them bodily and using them official.

Acting Postmaster Tague included the five-point directions in a letter to all postmasters in the Boston Postal District and also sent them to editors of other newspapers in the district, with a request that they be published for the guidance of veterans.

In sending out Miss Doyle's list of instructions, the acting postmaster said they would "prove of inestimable benefit to our veterans in the receiving of their bonds and the certification for redemption, if desired."

And the words of the acting postmaster proved to be correct.

Sunday School Bus Driver Held

Charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, drunkenness, passing a red light and leaving the scene of an accident, Leo C. Downing, 33, of Roberts street, Malden, driver of a Sunday school picnic bus, pleaded not guilty today in Peabody court.

The case was put over for one week by Judge Daniel C. Manning and Downing was released on bail.

None of the 40 women and children in the bus were hurt, but three persons were injured in the rumble seat of a coupe with which the bus collided on the Newburyport turnpike in South Lynnfield.

Mrs. Francis Johnstone of Lynnroad street, Somerville, suffered injuries to her chest

Summer?

The second day of summer was a bit chilly today, with the mercury in the low sixties, and the forecast was that it would stay chilly for the next 24 hours.

Summer was ushered in at 11:29 a. m. yesterday, when the thermometer registered 80. By afternoon it was much lower. By midnight it was 61 degrees.

The hottest June 22 on record is for 1921, when the temperature reached 93. The coldest was a 48 mark in 1881.

11 YEARS Expended on EXHIBIT

DRAMA SHOWN IN ART WORK

One of the most interesting facts in connection with the Holy Land Exhibit coming to Boston next week is the mechanics of its operation.

There are 740 pieces in this vast exhibit that move, not in the jerky fashion of marionettes, but like figures in real life, in miniature, of course.

It took the builders of this exhibit years to arrange the clockwork mechanism to the point of perfection they desired.

In fact it took Joseph and Salvators Gauci, the brothers who built the exhibit, eleven years of constant toil and study, and the aid of many expert assistants.

The Holy Land Exhibit will be in Horticultural Hall, beginning a week from tomorrow. It will remain for four weeks, closing July 26.

The exhibit shows in complete detail, Palestine at the time of Jesus—its three provinces, Judea, Galilee and Samaria.

The movable figures depict those who took part in the principal incidents in the life of Jesus, the climax being the Crucifixion on Mount Calvary.

The exhibit is being sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, proceeds to go to the Christmas Basket Fund for 1936.

'Tim' Durant's Wife in Reno

Reno, Nev., June 22 (AP)—Mrs. Adelaide Hutton Durant, daughter of the breakfast food heiress, has moved into a University of Nevada sorority home, but refuses to comment on whether she plans to seek a divorce from Thomas W. Durant, president of the United Hunts Racing Association of New York.

She and "Tim" Durant, whose marriage in January, 1927, was a major event of the New York social season, separated during the winter of 1935.

Last February Mrs. Durant filed a separation suit, to which her husband consented, and she was awarded custody of their seven-year-old daughter, Marjorie.

FARM AND GOLD PLANKS WORRY DEMOCRATS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, June 22—The supposedly simple task of writing a Democratic platform for 1936 acceptable to President Roosevelt today developed two major controversies, with platform-writers sharply divided over the best method of meeting the Republican platform and the Lemke-O'Brien third party threat.

Proposed farm relief and labor planks were subjected to far-reaching controversies. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and his former aide, Chester C. Davis, were reported battling for a far more liberal farm plank than written tentatively by the President's platform advisers. They were said to be urging a plank guaranteeing "crop insurance" to farmers suffering losses by floods, dust storms or pestilence after entering upon the administration's soil conservation program.

The proposed labor plank developed a major controversy over the constitutional issue. The President was said to favor a plank, silent about mending the Constitution, and based upon his recent Little Rock speech, but declaring the Democrats will provide federal protection for the worker and the aged.

WOOING MIDDLE WEST

Some liberal Democratic groups demanded the "crop insurance" guarantee and an outright declaration for a constitutional amendment to guarantee minimum wages and hours of labor in event such legislation cannot be enacted by Congress under the Constitution. The liberals argued this was vital to offset the bold declaration of Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican presidential nominee, on the social issue.

Another group of Democratic liberals demanded the platform be written to appeal to the middle west, where the Lemke-O'Brien third party ticket might cut into Democratic success. One gesture in this direction was carried in the proposed monetary plank, which strongly denounced the gold standard.

This would be in sharp contrast to the Republican platform, which was silent on the gold issue, but in equally sharp conflict with the public declaration of Governor Landon for a return to the gold standard whenever it can be accomplished without injury to domestic economics.

"SOUND, AGAINST GOLD"

The proposed monetary plank read:

"To return to the old free gold standard would be to surrender control of dollar purchasing power to the private interests which allowed it to fluctuate so disastrously as to close all banks in 1933. To return to the old free gold standard is to invite monetary chaos and national disaster.

"We pledge continuance of sound currency, with steady purchasing power of the dollar which will do justice not only as between present debtor and creditor, but as between all who make commitments for the future in terms of the dollar."

This was virtually what Senator William E. Borah (R.), Idaho, tried unsuccessfully to write into the Republican platform.

The foreign affairs plank was written by Secretary of State Hull. It pledged the "moral" support of the United States to the rest of the world in any move toward disarmament, arbitration of international disputes and prevention of war. It boasted of the success of the reciprocal trade treaty policy and declared for its continuation. It re-asserted the Roosevelt "good neighbor" policy.

UNION PARTY'S CHIEFS CONFER

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin conferred in secret yesterday at Crest Barrington, in the Berkshire Hills, with the new Union Party's national ticket, it was learned today.

Besides former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien of Boston, vice-presidential candidate, and Congressman William Lemke of North Dakota, who is running for President, those with Father Coughlin were Congressman Martin L. Sweeney of Cleveland and Charles P. Keelon, of New York.

The meeting took place at Keelon's estate, where Father Coughlin occasionally spends a few days, resting.

Choice of a national chairman was discussed and a start made toward forming a national committee. Father Coughlin left for Detroit and Lemke returned to Washington with Sweeney after the meeting.

The Senator Says:

Democrats Seek Excuse in Talk

Via Air Mail,
Timmy's Tavern,
Boston, Mass.

Philadelphia,
June 22, 1936.

Dear Timmy:—

Something terrible has happened and I wish you to come here at once.

To think, Timmy, that after a long and distinguished career of American statesmanship I should encounter the major disappointment of my life at a Democratic National Convention!

Speaking of the convention, Timmy, what they are calling it is the Tin-Ear Convention because all of the delegates are guaranteed a tin ear before it is over.

Nothing is going to happen except that everybody will make a speech. The idea of having so many speeches is that somebody might stumble on a real argument why the Democrats should repeat. Prizes are offered.

The convention opens tomorrow with a speech by Toastmaster General Farley and from then on it is all speeches until the big speech Saturday night when the President finally surprised and extremely grateful for the honor bestowed upon him by the nation and the WPA, makes his acceptance speech.

That is the only one they are charging extra for if you listen.

Walking Delegate

Timmy, until I get here and discover how many speeches they are going to make, seeing how many different ways they can say the same thing, I miss the deep psychology of the sale of the "nomination tickets" at $1 to Helen to the President tell the Democrats why they nominate him again.

Now that I am here the idea explains itself. If you pay $1 to listen to the President accept his nomination you do not have to listen to the 51 speeches that second his nomination. Timmy, you cannot beat the Democrats for knowing a bargain. The tickets are selling like mad.

Well, Timmy, I am looking forward to the arrival of the Massachusetts boys tonight. Governor Jim is coming and he is not routed by way of Porto Rico this year.

The old Bay State will be without a national committeeman present, I guess, Joe Ely, the walking delegate, is still walking but he does not know in which direction.

Joe McGrath, our state committee chairman, looks like a cinch to succeed Joe Ely when the votes are counted here this evening. Joe will hitch-hike but he will not walk.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. McNamara, the Massachusetts national committeewoman, is already here and it looks as if she would get the job permanent.

Quite a number of the Massachusetts boys have come here early to practice up on their speeches because a strong attack is the best defense and one tin ear deserves another.

I pick up a little news here about the home town and I will pass this on to you. This is that Mayor Freddie is grooming Corporation Counsel Henry Elliott Foley of Hyde Park to be Suffolk district attorney, and will not give his backing to Dan Gallagher's son, Owen, who he appointed chairman of the street commission.

The corporation counsel is now regarded as the big man in Mayor Freddie's administration and there is much hard feeling among the City Hall boys, who expected Mayor Freddie would back Owen Gallagher for the district attorney's job.

What I hear the Democrats talking about mostly, though, is that it looks like a much tougher fight in Massachusetts than they expected on account of the fine shotgun harmony done at Springfield. I will tell you more about this when you get here.

The terrible thing that happens to me, Timmy, is this. All last night I am very busy finding out what is going on in the back rooms and it is exceedingly hot. In fact it keeps getting hotter and hotter so you can tell there is going to be a convention.

Life Preserver

Well, Timmy, as you may imagine, as it keeps getting hotter and hotter, The Senator is getting thirstier and thirstier and along about an early hour this morning what do I find myself steering into but a handsome cafe that advertises food and strong drink for mankind, especially delegates, at prices only slightly advanced over normal.

At first I think I will go for a sour, but then I figure it will be sour enough the rest of the week and I am sort of debating between an Uncle Tom Collins and a Brandy Buzzard when what does my eye light on but a sign with little icicles on it that says, "Boston Cooler—5c."

It is just at this point that I notice they are starting to close up the joint for the night and are putting out some of the lights, so I see the only thing to do is get a copy on the table quick.

"Make it four Boston Coolers," I tell the waiter.

"Four Boston Coolers?" said the waiter. "Surely you do not mean four Boston Coolers, sir."

Timmy, when I am tired and then I am thirsty, and when I am at there is nothing I cherish as than having an argument with somebody who wishes to tell me what I want to drink.

"Six Boston Coolers, my man," I ordered, "and with dispatch."

"Very good, sir," he says. "Six Boston Coolers it is."

Timmy, I have worked hard all night. I have concentrated my energies and my will in a wild orgy of minding other people's business. I am dry and exhausted, my tongue is lolling like a hound dog's and need stimulation as badly as the upsign. I am anticipating with all the anticipation at my command and I am just closing my eyes and sort of drifting away in a dream of dunking my snozzola on a long, cold Boston Cooler when what comes the waiter.

Timmy, what has the waiter got in the tray but six halves of cantaloupe that are filled with vanilla ice cream!

So please come at once. The room is crowded and I neglected to make any hotel reservations but I am so all right because if I had made a reservation it would have been a suite on the 16th floor overlooking the park.

You can stop in the suite I did not reserve or maybe they will let you spend one night in the cell with me.

Anyway, bring the bail money.

THE SENATOR.

Senator Copeland's Stand

THE ANNOUNCEMENT by Senator Copeland, of New York, that, although an elected delegate to the Democratic convention, he has no intention of attending it, brought consternation to the New Deal camp.

No more striking sign could be given that the New Deal party is in NO TRUE SENSE the Democratic party than the refusal of this WELL-KNOWN Democrat, New Yek's senior Senator in Washington, to be mixed up in its deliberations or to be a part, in any way, of its organized claque.

Royal S. Copeland has been one of the most consistent figures in the Democratic party.

He has demonstrated his stregth with the rank and file of the party, whenev he has stood for election, by rolling up unprecedented majorities.

He has been a loyal organization man, able to combine party regularity wi distinguished public service.

But he has seen enough o the Raw Deal to know that it is the very OPOSITE of Democracy, and that no TRUE Democrats can have anything to do with it.

He declares that the Administration "CANNOT BE TRUSTED."

He states—what everybdy knows—that the heads of the New Deal are preparing to endorse at the Philadelphia convntion "THE DOCTRINES OF KARL MRX AND LENIN."

NO ONE who knows Senator Copeland could doubt where he stands on such a proposition!

If such disloyalty to America and to the Democratic party is to reive endorsement, Senator Copeland will leavit to the parasites and the army of bureaucrats whom the Roosevelt Administration has boug and paid for, to vote the endorsement.

As for himself, he will have nothing to do with it.

New York's Senator will have numerous and distinguished company among the TRUE Democrats of the nation, in a straight forward and fearless stand!

Dear Pres: By Winston Norman

By WINSTON NORMAN

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Philadelphia, June 22—Dear Mr. Roosevelt: Excuse me, Mr. President, but you better rush up here & put some life in our Democrat party. The convenshun is gettin' so dull that it looks like we was Republicans, and if we don't get bright purty quick, somethin' awful will happen.

The only signs of animal life is reporters. I snuck in on the press confrince they was havin' with Jim Farley. He settin' in a little room about two feet by four feet and reporters was millin' around like sardines in a can.

Them reporters were packed so close together, lookin' for news, that when they got loose from the room they found out they had wrote each other's story.

Well Mr. President, the storys didn't say nothin', because the only thing which happen today was as follows: Two boys came down the main street, leadin' two jack-asses. The jack-asses was very tame, they was trottin' along with signs sayin' "Welcom Democrats" on their back.

LONG-EARED DEMS

Them jack-asses is confusin' to the natives of Filadelphia, because a man stood at the sign on their backs & says to me:

"Well, all kinds of Democrats is welcom here, but them two is the longest-eared ones I seen yet."

The man which says that was the only native of Filadelphia that was out yesterday. I sat him where the rest of the town was at, and he says:

"The rest of Filadelphia has already took a look at your convenshun, they are now in church, askin' the Lord's forgiveness."

As fer delegates, Mr. President, they are comin' into town so thick that they have overflow into the suburbs, such as New York.

And by golly, Mr. President, you got delegates from the funniest places you didn't ever see. Take Pahrump, fer instance. I bump into a lady delegate from out in Nevada, which is a state consistin of a big desert with a sprinklin of Democrats and divorces.

CASE OF INDIGESTION

Well, I figgered Pahrump was a case of indigestion, but this lady delegate says no. She says Pahrump is a town made up of two people, her and her husband. They also got some Indians out there, but Indians don't get no vote because they are 100 per cent American.

So it looks like the 1-lady delegation from Pahrump is just reppasentin her and her husband. You are going to get the unalimouse vote of Pahrump, Mr. President, all two of them.

Well, who else do you think is here? Congress is here, by golly. They moved their bizness up from Wash so as to save on phone bills. They do not have to ring up Farley fer long-distance orders, they are gettin them now by hand.

Now fer the leadin Democrats which isn't here. Well, Al Smith isn't here, Sen. Read isn't neither. Gov. Talmadge isn't. Breckinridge isn't. Ely isn't. That makes five, and when they take their walk they can do it in a taxicab. Five can ride for the price of one.

HAVIN' A HEAT WAVE

Well, Mr. President, us delegates is doin some wonderful things to save the nation. We are going to have a prize fight, 6 baseball games, 1 mummers parade, 1 beauty contest and 1 heat wave.

We already got the heat wave.

I seen the convenshun hall where we are going to start yellin for you tomorrow, Mr. President. My golly, that hall is about ½ way to Pittsburgh. It is so far out of Filadelphia that Farley is puttin a branch post-office in it, so as delegates can write back to their hotel for a change of under-wear.

The convenshun hall is painted up purtier than a chorus girl, Mr. Pres. Carpinters is painting it green & white, and one of them says to me:

"We are goin to have enuff whitewash left over, so as you Democrats can whitewash you post-master general."

Yours till tomorrow.

Joke: He Steals Homing Pigeons

Unless the booty is decorating some table in the form of squabs, the theft of 40 racing pigeons from the yard of Lieutenant Richard Kirby of the Everett fire department isn't going to do the culprit much good.

Because the birds are homing pigeons and will return to their own loft once they are released, no matter how far distant they are.

GET GULFLUBE—It's "Stripped for action"!

Poorly refined motor oils are like a swimmer with all his clothes on. Such oils can't do an efficient job because they carry too much excess baggage—waste material that should be "stripped off" by further refining.

Most 25c oils are like a swimmer stripped of part of his clothes. Refining has discarded some of the waste—but still not enough for best performance. This was as far as any refiner of 25c oils could afford to go, before Gulf's Multi-sol process was perfected.

LANDON FIXES NOTIFICATION FOR JULY 23

Topeka, Kan., June 22 (INS)—The formal notification ceremonies for the Republican presidential nominee, Governor Alfred M. Landon, will take place on the steps of the Kansas State House at dusk, Thursday, July 23, the governor announced today.

The colorful outdoor ceremonies will mark the opening of the G. O. P. campaign.

Topeka authorities announce simultaneously that they are making plans for the greatest public meeting in the city's history.

The nominee will be formally notified by the committee selected at the Cleveland convention. The Governor, it was stated, has been in communication with Rep. Bertrand H. Snell of New York, permanent chairman of the convention and chairman of the notification committee arranging details.

SILENT ABOUT SMITH

Asked for comment on the action of Alfred E. Smith and four other leading Democrats urging the Democratic national convention to "put aside Franklin D. Roosevelt," Gov. Landon declined to commend. However, he later asserted:

"The line of demarcation between fealty of party and loyalty to country is something for each citizen to determine for himself."

TO MEET LOWDEN

In announcing the date for the notification ceremonies, Governor Landon revealed he already has begun work on his acceptance speech. He said he hoped to complete it during his stay in Estes Park, Colorado, where he goes Wednesday for a ten-day vacation.

Meanwhile, it was learned authoritatively that Governor Landon will confer with Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and authority on agriculture, early in July on farm problems.

Nurse Loses Long Battle for Life

Miss Virginia Mikkola

After a fight for life, lasting six weeks, during which her own courage was her chief asset, Miss Virginia Mikkalo, 22, an attendant at City Hospital, is dead from pneumonia contracted while on duty.

Several years ago Miss Mikkalo, whose home was at 8 Minot street, Dorchester, courageously and successfully fought off an attack of infantile paralysis.

She obtained a job as a nurses' assistant, preparing dressings in the women's surgical ward, and endeared herself to doctors, nurses and patients alike. After she became ill with pneumonia early last month, not an hour passed without a request for information of her condition.

On May 15 she was placed in an oxygen tent and had been under that treatment continually until Friday, when more drastic methods were resorted in an effort to keep her alive with oxygen. She died yesterday.

Doctors, who had marveled at the spirit she showed in fighting the illness, joined with nurses and patients all over the big hospital today, mourning her passing.

FUNERAL FOR 11 LAKE VICTIMS

Lubec, Me., June 22—Reverently and silently they placed their tragic burdens side by side on the grassy knoll overlooking Split Hill Cemetery.

The eleven pitifully small caskets contained all but one of the child victims who perished Friday when an overloaded dinghy capsized in the waters of Lake Gardiner.

Reverently and silently a throng of more than 1000 friends and townsmen bowed their heads.

There was no weeping, only the sound of pages being turned as the Rev. Leroy Cleveland, of West Lubec Baptist Church, began the "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away."

Again the voice of the minister rose.

"Help us, Oh Lord! in this hour as you never have before."

"Why did it happen?"

"But these children have not died in vain if we do not permit this to be their last memorial."

"A nation has been shocked by their death. We must be awakened by the tragedy to make this a better world to live in."

The heads of the throng bowed more deeply as the minister spoke the prayer. And the services were over.

W. J. Devanna, 82, Compositor, Dies

William J. Devanna, for 32 years a member of the Boston American composing room force, is dead at his home, 29 Forest street, Roxbury, at the age of 82.

A solemn high mass of requiem will be sung Wednesday morning at St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury.

Mr. Devanna was stricken eight months ago and died Sunday at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. He is survived by his widow, three brothers and one sister.

TWO DENTISTS DYING IN CRASH

Two Brookline dentists were seriously injured today when their automobile crashed into a tree in the Arborway near St. Joseph street, Jamaica Plain.

They are Dr. Henry C. Hooper, 35, of Elm street, and Dr. Edmund Tobin, 42, of Davis avenue, both of Brookline. Both are at City Hospital.

Dr. Hooper was found to have suffered fractures of the breastbone, right arm and several ribs. Internal hemorrhages in his case were causing concern. His condition was reported critical.

Little hope was held out for the recovery of Dr. Tobin. He suffered fractures of both legs below the knees, a fracture of the upper right leg, loss of several teeth and possible fracture of the skull.

Rounding the curve in the highway at the point of the accident, it is believed the operator lost control of the machine.

Tire tracks show where the car hurtled sideways across the road and smashed head-on into a large tree some 20 feet from the roadside.

Both men were hurled clear of the wreckage by the impact.

DOLAN BANKED MILLION; SUIT AMENDED

Edmund L. Dolan deposited close to $1,000,000 in two banks during his incumbency as city treasurer in the years 1927 to 1931, it was testified in Suffolk Superior Court today during the trial in which the city seeks to recover $250,000 from Dolan and six other defendants.

It was during these years while Dolan was city treasurer that the city alleges Dolan set up "dummy" brokerage firms through which he purchased some $10,000,000 in bonds for the city at exorbitant rates.

Judge Edward F. Hanify took under advisement a motion by corporation counsel to amend the suit brought by the city, urging that Dolan be held responsible and held liable for all damages suffered by the plaintiff.

Special Corporation Counsel Robert G. Dodge argued that Dolan violated his breach of trust as city treasurer by dealing with the Legal Securities Corporation, allegedly a "dummy" firm owned by him.

Dodge further charged in his argument that "every single item the city purchased from Legal Securities Corporation was purchased at an exorbitant price."

BARRED FROM BOOKS

It was charged in court that Attorney Thomas C. Mahoney has sought to examine the records of Dolan and others as city treasurer in order to make comparative findings and that he had been refused access to the books.

George R. Farnum, corporation counsel, informed the court that he had forbade Mahony to see any records of transactions in the city treasurer's office other than those of his client, Dolan.

Arguments on whether the city was the proper plaintiff in the case against Dolan, when trustees held full or part title to some of the funds from which the money for purchases of bonds were made, were also taken under advisement by the court.

SUBMIT BRIEFS

Counsel for both sides will submit briefs to Judge Hanify on this question which has been before the court since early since the trial opened three weeks ago.

Mahony told the court profits made by the City of Boston on bond transactions during Dolan's incumbency amounted to nearly $1,000,000.

Richard D. Seemans, special accountant for the city, traced chronologically the deals made by Dolan with Legal Securities Corporation. He is expected to testify late tomorrow.

At that time Mahony will ask for a two-day suspension of the court in order that he might have an opportunity to examine records that have been testified to in court.

Mahony announced definitely that Dolan would not be recalled to the witness stand.

Talmadge Seeks Smith, Ely Aid

Atlanta, Ga., June 22 (INS)—Asserting the renomination of President Roosevelt by the Democratic party would be the "mistake of its life," Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia today invited Al Smith and his adherents to cooperate with him in opposing certain policies of the Roosevelt administration.

Although the Governor, who has been one of the severest critics of the Roosevelt policies, refused to state whether he would go to Philadelphia for the convention, he said he could be there "in three hours" if needed.

Troops Hunt Lost Tooth From Whale

Falmouth, June 23—Lost — one whale's tooth!

But it will be found today, for the Massachusetts National Guard has been turned out to look for it.

Not quite all state troops, of course, are assigned to the whale's tooth-chasing detail.

Only those day, however, at the YD's summer training encampment on Counamessett farm, North Falmouth, directed scouts to sally forth at dawn—their objective, "one whale's tooth marker, corner boundary post of the military reservation."

There's a lot of ground to be covered, for the reservation extends over 36 square miles of territory.

Other corner "posts" are a large boulder, an oak tree and a stone slab.

These three the Yankee Division's skirmishers expect to identify without trouble.

But the whale's tooth—that's different.

The citizen soldiers don't number in their ranks a single expert in the dental equipment of marine mammals. They aren't sure they'd know a whale's tooth, if it popped up and snapped at them.

But, orders is orders in the army.

And that whale's tooth, dead or alive, is as good as captured, right now!

G. O. P. VICTORY SEEN BY KNOX

Worcester, June 22—The Lemke-O'Brien third party, endorsed by Father Coughlin, and the Smith-Ely bolt from Roosevelt ranks, make more certain than ever" a Republican victory in the coming presidential election, Colonel Frank Knox said today as he stepped from train to auto here, en route to Manchester, N. H.

The Republican candidate for the vice-presidancy plans a vacation of two weeks at his former New Hampshire home.

"The proposed third party, with Lemke as its head, will be a real threat in the coming election—but not a threat to the Republicans," Colonel Knox asserted.

"Lemke's strength should be greatest in the west and middle-west, especially in Oregon and Washington.

"His party will take votes, however, from the Democrats, not from us.

"Another factor making a Republican victory more certain than ever is the Smith-Ely bolt from regular Democratic ranks.

"I do not mean to say that Roosevelt will be defeated easily. The Republican win will be no walkover. Yet I do anticipate a Republican victory."

ROXBURY CLUB RAID SNARES 13

Thirteen men and women were arrested, the names of 78 others taken for investigation, in a raid on the Douglas Club in Roxbury today.

One woman and one man escaped by leaping 20 feet to the sidewalk from a second-story window.

The raiding squad, comprised of three sergeants and seven patrolmen, was led by Captain James T. Sheehan of Division 10.

Five of the 13 arrested were women. They were taken before Roxbury court to face charges of being idle and disorderly. The eight men were booked for drunkenness.

Coin in Slot, Out Drops Fish Worms

Northampton, June 22 (AP)—A home-made slot-machine has solved for Herman Douyard, a barber here, the problem of distributing bait to his fisherman-customers.

With little time between shaves and haircuts to sell worms, Douyard invented the slot-machine last winter.

Into a slot, river and lake-bound anglers drop a coin, turn a "crank" and out falls a can of worms.

Business increased. Douyard hired 10 youngsters to carry on the production end of the business. They dig the bait.

"Someday," said Douyard, "perhaps this side-line will bring me enough money to retire."

Cummings to Quit Democratic Post

Philadelphia, June 22 (UP)—Walter J. Cummings, Chicago bank president and railroad car manufacturer, will resign shortly as treasurer of the Democratic national committee, it was learned on high authority today.

Cummings will be succeeded by W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the committee, who is now in charge of raising campaign funds.

Boy Dying After Fall From Truck

Francis Frawley, 14, of Summer street, Lynn, was near death in Cambridge hospital today after having fallen on his head from a truck at Prison Point bridge, Cambridge.

Police were seeking the driver, who, they said, apparently had not known the boy was on the truck and continued driving.

ARSON SUSPECT HUNTED IN 2 BLAZES

Two fires, which police say were incendiary, drove 35 men, women and children out of their tenements in Poplar street in the West End.

Following the Chelsea street, Charlestown, fire last week which cost the lives of three persons and 15 other blazes of suspected incendiary origin within two months, the fires sent both police and fire department arson squads into action.

Thirty-one persons, most of them in their nightclothes, were driven out of 23 Poplar street, when a blaze originating in an ash shed, spread to the house.

Five hundred dollars damage was done to the house, a five-story brick structure, owned by John Goldberg of Latell street, Brookline.

Within four minutes after this fire was discovered, dwellers at 13 Poplar street smelled smoke and found a pile of rubbish burning in a hallway on the first floor of a four-story brick house.

Twenty-five persons, already aroused by the excitement due to the other blaze, grabbed their clothes and went pell-mell down stairs.

Bakers of N. E. Hold Convention

Two Greater Boston men were today elected officers of the New England Bakers' Association at the 15th annual convention which opened today at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Over 400 delegates are attending the conclave, which continues through tomorrow.

New officials elected today include Paul G. Stavens, Bridgeport, Ct., president; Otto M. Breikorn, Holyoke, vice-president; G. W. Beckay, New Britain, Ct., vice-president; Guy Maynard, Cambridge, vice-president, and Robert E. Sullivan, Boston, executive secretary.

Hamilton Talk on Air Tonight

New York, June 22 (INS)—John D. M. Hamilton, new Republican National Committee chairman, will fire the opening gun in the campaign to elect Governor Alfred M. Landon when he speaks at a dinner to be attended by approximately 3500 Republicans here tonight.

The speech will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up, which includes Station WEEI, Boston, at 9:30 p. m.

C. Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for governor of Illinois, will introduce Hamilton to Republican leaders attending the banquet from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Connecticut.

Other speakers will include Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, manager of the Republican campaign in the East.

WOMAN FREED ON GUN CHARGE

Taunton, June 22—Mrs Eleanor Allen, 37, of Taunton avenue, Seekonk, was found not guilty in district court here today on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on Manuel Preston, Jr., 31, a border in her house.

Police said Mrs. Allen fired three shots last Tuesday after Preston came home intoxicated and looked for his gun after he had a fight with another man in a beer parlor.

She said she prevented him from getting the gun and that while Preston was abusing her, her niece, Leah Allen, 14, obtained the weapon. She said she fired three shots in the air to scare him. Police said one bullet struck Preston in the shoulder.

His condition is not serious.

Wage Bonus for 1300

New Britain, Ct., June 22 (AP)—The Fafnir Bearing Company announced today that its 1300 employes will receive a bonus July 15 based on their earnings for the past three months.

DALEY-FOLEY BRIDAL

Couple Wed at Jamaica Plain

Joining the ranks of June brides, Catherine V. Foley, daughter of Mrs. William Foley, of Pond street, Jamaica Plain, was married today to Robert N. Daley, son of Mrs. Julia Daley of South Boston, in St. Thomas Church, Jamaica Plain.

A brother of the bride, the Rev. Thomas M. Foley of St. Catherine's Church in Somerville, officiated. Nuptial mass was celebrated by a brother of the bride, the Rev. William B. Foley of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. Another brother, the Rev. Charles J. Foley was deacon.

Maid of honor was Mary J. Foley, sister of the bride, and best man was Dr. Henry Grogan of Cambridge.

Bridesmaids were Phyllis O'Connell, Genevieva Callahan, Helen Buckley and Madeleine Egan, all classmates of the bride at Emmanuel College. Ushers were William McMorrow, Gerald Bruin, William Brady and John Dooley.

A reception and wedding breakfast was held at Copley-Plaza Hotel. The couple left on a honeymoon trip to Bermuda and will live at their home in Wellesley. The bridegroom is a graduate of Boston College and Harvard Law School.

FIGHT AGAINST PHILBIN BEGUN BY T. M. RAY

Another shot in the Massachusetts battle against the New Deal ticket was fired today with the appearance of Thomas M. Ray at the State House to get nomination papers for the lieutenant-governorship.

Ray, whose home is in Lynn, was executive messenger under former Governor Joseph B. Ely, and is a friend of U. S. Senator David I. Walsh.

He will oppose Philip J. Philbin of Clinton, indorsed for the second place on the state ticket by the Democratic pre-primary convention in Springfield.

SEES SHIFT

"Philbin practically stole the indorsement through the delegates' mistaken belief Senator Walsh favored his nomination," Ray declared today.

"When the voters go to the primary polls in September, the truth will be known. This hand-picked candidate cannot win."

Ray, it is believed, will have the support of Governor Ely, possibly that of Senator Walsh and others opposed to the Roosevelt regime.

Philbin is also faced with the announced opposition of Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester, former Boston city councillor, who sought the nomination for lieutenant-governor two years ago as well as this year.

TAKES SAME STAND

Kelly said the same thing about Philbin's indorsement as Ray did and predicted the defeat of the convention candidate at the primaries.

Kelly's opposition, it is felt, is bound to attract many New Deal votes that might otherwise go to Philbin, thus enhancing Ray's chances.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Opening of Casino in Magnolia Attracts Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

HOW TIME FLIES . . . It seems as if just a few days ago we hurried in out of the frosty March winds to attend fashion shows of summer clothes . . .

Then . . . the time when we could wear bathing suits and flowery beach pajamas seemed way off in the distant future . . . But now . . . it has already arrived . . . Schools and colleges are closed and the summer season on the North Shore is well under way . . .

LOUISE STEVENS

Some of the summery nets and embroidered muslin gowns we envied in the fashion shows were actually worn at the opening of the Casino in Magnolia over the week-end . . . Betsy Cushing Roosevelt favored the popular net in a cocoa brown shade with a pale beige jacket, as she helped James entertain several gentlemen friends . . .

One of the newest couples to settle on honeymoon row in Marblehead, the Wallace Pierces, were in a party with Ginny Phelan and Don Fitzpatrick . . . Mrs. Pierce, the former Mary Markle Bannard of New York, had a great time meeting some of her husband's friends, who are just congregating on the shore for another summer . . . She and Wallie were a symphony in black and white as they danced together . . . his white linen jacket setting off her black net gown with its trailing skirt and rows and rows of fine ruffles edged with silk rick rack braid . . . To brighten her outfit she had a rope of brilliants twisted three times about her throat, and several diamond bracelets, but none could dim the brilliance of her beautiful engagement ring . . .

Her mother and father-in-law were at a nearby table with their two daughters and a number of young men . . . Janet, deb of a not too distant future, was very poised in a pink and white organdie with deep rose shoulder straps, and escorted by Eddie Forier . . . Dottie, who came out last year, was having fun with Charlie Curran and Dave Walldon . . .

A new kind of wall flower blossomed at the Casino Friday evening when some of the girls were left alone at their tables while the fight fans listened to the radio in the new cocktail bar . . . Vergenia Phelps was just too tired to follow her fiance, Dick Berry, into the bar so he came back and gave her the latest report every once in a while . . . They were both in Jean Read's and Whitney Stoddard's wedding party that afternoon and had been through several hectic days of teas and dances . . . After the wedding they changed into daytime clothes and dropped in at the scene of the "night before's" revelry to think it all over and relax a bit . . . One by one the ushers showed up and by the time the night was well along their party had grown considerably . . . Most of the ushers were still in the cutaways but Jim Quantrel and Louis Stoner had changed into sport clothes . . . Before the party broke up they made all kinds of plans for meeting in time to make the boat and bid the bride and groom bon voyage on their honeymoon to Europe . . .

Tommy Leiter Arrives on North Shore

THE ARRIVAL OF TOMMY LEITER on the shore indicates that the affairs of the horsey set are off to a good start . . . for Tommy spends his time following the hunting season around from Myopia to Aiken to Saratoga and so forth . . . He made a threesome with the Joe Woods and danced with Mrs. Woods while her husband had to content himself with dining, on account of his lame ankle . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Steinert and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Ward dined together, Bob and Hugh talking politics while the two wives exchanged plans and ideas for the Christ Church fair which comes early in July . . .

Witticisms and bon mots were flying across the table where Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Rowe were having a midnight supper with Mr. and Mrs. William Martin of Dedham . . . Mrs. Rowe was gowned in a fine black marquisette dress and Mrs. Martin wore a Frenchy outfit of bright blue with fuchsia and purple flowers at the waistline . . .

John R. Chapins Feted on Anniversary

AMERICAN FAMILIES, and especially husbands, are famous for forgetting wedding annivesmaries . . . and true to form Mr. and Mrs. John R. Chapin of Brookline, now of Cohasset, hardly realized that Saturday was their 25th wedding anniversary until they heard the familiar strains of the wedding march floating into the dining room where they were just finishing a quiet family dinner . . .

Naturally they investigated and were greatly surprised to find that their daughters, Martha and Joan, had arranged a little surprise party in honor of the occasion . . . and a number of their friends had brought along the accordionist from Ruby Newman's orchestra to add to the evening's fun . . . Martha and Joan invited their grandmother, Mrs. Henry B. Chapin, for dinner, and among the friends and relatives who drank a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Chapin were Mr. and Mrs. William de Ford, Mrs. Chapin's brother and sister-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Revere, Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Watters and their son Richard, Jr., who is engaged to Joan Chapin; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. J. Willard Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul P. Bird with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bartow; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gleason (Mary McElwain) of Winchester, Katie Johnson and Priscilla Phelan . . .

There's lots going on up in Gardiner, Maine, where Frances Gardiner of Brookline and Marc Peter, Jr., are all ready for their wedding tomorrow at Oaklands, the summer home of the Robert Hallowell Gardiners . . . Saturday evening the two families had an "intimate" dinner and yesterday there was a lawn party at Oaklands . . .

Today the ex-governor of Maine, William Tudor Gardiner and Mrs. Gardiner, aunt and uncle of the bride, are entertaining all the out-of-town guests at a picnic on their estate in Montsweag, Maine . . . and the final pre-wedding celebration is the dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner, parents of the bride, are giving this evening at Oaklands . . .

TRINITY Ceremony Unites Socialites

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT MARSHALL MITCHELL as they left Trinity Church on Saturday following their marriage which attracted a large number of socialites. The bride, who was Janet Sawyer, is the daughter of Mrs. Laurence Taylor Sawyer of Milton, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Henry S. Howes of Marlborough street and the late J. Bertram Mitchell.

Betty Fitzpatrick Weds on Friday

Ceremony at Summer Home

COMMENCEMENT and a wedding . . . all in a fortnight . . . so reads the June calendar of Betty Fitzpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Fitzpatrick of Abington and Falmouth Heights.

Betty was graduated from Wellesley College a week ago and on Friday afternoon at an afternoon ceremony at Sea-View, the summer home of her parents, she becomes the bride of Archie Kennel, Jr. of St. Louis, Mo.

The wedding is going to be one of those delightful summer affairs . . . the bride will wear marquisette over taffeta and will carry a shower bouquet of Stella roses and lilies of the valley. Her youthful sisters, Charlotte and Mary, will be her attendants. They are planning to wear embroidered organdie over maize taffeta and carry nosegays of old-fashioned flowers.

John Winkle, Jr., will act as best man and the ushers will be William Fitzpatrick and Richard Bancroft of Dedham.

Miss Fitzpatrick, whose mother serves on the executive board of Philomathean Club, prepared for Wellesley at Villa Marie in Montreal, Canada.

Mr. Kennel, Jr., whose parents are Dr. and Mrs. Archie Kennel, was educated at Westminster College, Vanderbilt University and Harvard Law School.

Mary Jane Ryan Guest of Honor

Dorothy Woodbury was one of the season's charming hostess at the tea and shower which she gave Mary Jane Ryan at the Copley-Plaza, Saturday. Guests at the party were Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Jr., Mrs. Oliver Sughrue, Mrs. Richard Nolan, Margaret Culhane and Mrs. Martin W. Ryan, mother of the bride-to-be. Mrs. John J. Balfe, Jr., and Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh.

Mary Jane, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin W. Ryan of Cambridge, has chosen Monday, at ten, to become the bride of Justin J. Connor of Chestnut Hill at St. Mary's of the Annunciation Church in Cambridge. Rev. John A. Butler will officiate and the breakfast and reception will follow at the Copley-Plaza.

Mrs. John J. Balfe, Jr., of Cambridge . . . bride-elect's sister, Dorothy . . . will be her matron of honor. Other members of the bridal party will be Helen Ryan of Cambridge, another sister, Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh of Chestnut Hill, sister of the groom, and Dorothy Woodbury of Chestnut Hill.

Kenneth Horgan of New York will be best man and usher will be John J. Balfe, Jr. Thomas Cavanaugh, James Magenis of Brookline and John Ryan of Cambridge.

Miss Ryan who has been active in 350 Club and Ace of Club's affairs, attended Sacred Heart Country Day School and Leslie School.

Mr. Connor was graduated from Boston College.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Edward J. Rose, 14, of 153 Centre street, Roxbury, commander of the Brown Bear squadron, and members of his flight unit, are redoubling their efforts to get an adult sponsor following the second annual rally of commanders at Boston American wing headquarters recently.

Edward and his friends are typical of alert, ambitious Junior Birdmen squadrons which hold regular meetings and add to their knowledge of aviation through interchange of opinions, readings and discussion of the Junior Birdmen page of the Sunday Advertiser, the keeping of scrapbooks and the rewarding of those members who excel in some phase of activity.

During the commanders rally, a number of speakers pointed out the advisability of each squadron having an adult relative or friend serve as sponsor to assist and advise on matters requiring mature opinions. The rule book for squadrons explains that these sponsors also serve as a council for the wing commander.

Most units have adult sponsors and according to Commander Rose, the Brown Bear squadron, one of the most progressive and deserving, will have one as soon as possible. It was organized last April with Edward as commander and the following as members, all of whom live in Jamaica Plain:

Robert McDougall, 13, of 78 Revere street; Wallace Bourne, 14, of 16 Revere street; Arthur Brady, 11, of 6 Harris avenue; and William Wild, 12, of 5 Peabody place.

To enlarge the squadron, the commander offered a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem to the boy who brought in the most members. The captain won.

The squaron now has a complete Junior Birdmen aviation library, having bought one Junior Birdmen handbook each week and are engaged in model plane construction under the guidance of Commander Rose, the captain and the sergeant.

Deciding early to keep an aviation scrapbook, the squadron now has three and a half books filled with pictures and articles which have bolstered the aviation knowledge of each member.

One of the proudest possessions of the unit is a distinctive letterhead and dues receipt originated by Commander Rose in the printing shop of the Mary E. Curley school. The insignia is in the form of a circle about the size of a silver dollar bearing the head of a brown bear.

Memorial Mass For Chesterton

DEATH IS A LITTLE MAN. By Minnie Hite Moody. Julian Messner.

Paradoxically speaking, this story is full of grief, yet it leaves one with a feeling of courage renewed to meet life's vicissitudes.

The story never really ends. The first sense of disappointment is quickly replaced by a sense of reality. The author has achieved a work of art which gives one a feeling of life continuing.

Ernie Weaver, the Negro woman who is the central figure, is going right on facing life's ups and downs, indefinitely. I shall never hear of her death, as I shall never hear of the death of many other persons I have known. But I know what her life is like. Her life and that of her family and friends is like something I have never known but Miss Moody has made it real for me.

A person's life is like that, of course—vague to outsiders at each end of it, but intensely real to a few over a certain span of years. For a while, in the years covered by these pages, these Negroes are real, with their sudden joys and intense sufferings. The book is a slice of life, of a kind unknown in the north, and it is so gracefully done, that it is hard to lay down the volume before finishing it, no matter what the hour. It is not very difficult to finish, either. Miss Moody does not waste any words.

With its predecessors in recent years this book only goes to prove that women make excellent novelists, if anybody doubted it, in view of their illustrious work of the past.

THE LIFE OF THE PARTY. By Elizabeth Jordan. Appleton-Century.

This story, a welcome relief from run-of-the-mine mystery yarns, weaves a fabric of romance and threatening tragedy which enmeshes the reader line by line as Ben Hale, quite an amateur sleuth, moves along toward a solution at the same time that the mystery is in the making.

There is much that is sinister, and much that is perfectly commonplace, at Camp Halcyon, and the young engineer, whose job it is to find out what his associates are plotting, has a hard job divining which is which.

Hale is an insufferable successman, but the mystery is an intriguing one. It would have been kind of Miss Jordan to make him blunder publicly in at least one particular, so that he could come more humbly to his sweetheart in the end, but setting that aside, I cannot but feel grateful to the author for giving us a really worth-reading mystery tale.

Mrs. Landon Has Complete Faith in Husband's Ability

NEEDS NO AID FROM WIFE, SHE SAYS

(The Boston Evening American presents herewith the concluding instalment of an intimate character study of Mrs. Alfred M. Landon and her children. The first installment appeared in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.)

By JANE ROCKWELL

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Topeka, Kansas, June 22— More apparent than her happiness for her husband's nomination, is Mrs. Alfred M. Landon's complete faith and confidence in his ability to handle the situation.

"He always has," she explains.

"Congeniality of tastes is important for family happiness," Mrs. Landon asserts.

"If you don't have it, you should acquire it."

"The Governor and I both like to read. We like to fish too." She chuckled, "You should have seen me on one of the fishing trips in Colorado.

"We hadn't planned to go, so I didn't have wading boots. Finally he found me a pair that was miles too big. I could hardly find a toe hold, and when we got into the stream, you know how icy the water is. I felt something cold. The boot had a huge hole in the toe. In spite of that handicap, I caught two trout. They were beauties."

She measured the size in true fisherman style, and went on:

"I didn't have any one to take them off the hook for me, so I struggled and finally got them into my knapsack, where they flapped and flapped against me. I'll never forget it. I hope this summer at Estes I have better luck.

'Alf's' First Call

"We both like to ride horseback. I haven't been able to go lately, because of doctor's orders (she had an appendicitis operation last summer just as the family was leaving for Colorado).

"But they say I can go riding again now. I'm so happy I'll ride on the ranch this summer."

Both Governor and Mrs. Landon are quiet, yet jovial persons and they have a good time together.

Before they were married, they drove the hour and a half ride to Kansas City for the National Republican Convention, for "Alf" thought no education was complete without "a world's series, a national convention and a prize fight."

A prominent independent oil man, Landon had been a widower ter years with a young dark-eyed daughter Peggy Anne, when a New York friend suggested he call on Theo Cobb when he came to Topeka.

"I though he was an insurance salesman when he first telephoned," she confessed.

But she soon was convinced otherwise, and then began the friendship that has continued through their married life.

"Alf" was the chairman of the Republican State Committee, stumping the state in behalf of Clyde M. Reed, Republican candidate for governor. He made talks to farmers in nearby small towns . . . Would Theo like to drive along? She would. She spent her time delving into dusty corners of second hand stores, searching for her hobby—pieces of lusterware and Westward Ho glass.

"The governor often brings me pieces when he returns from trips," she said.

Mrs. Landon's collection of Westward Ho glass is one of the finest of its kind.

Her lusterware, which she first started collecting in Europe, includes a rare canary pitcher, copper luster from Mexico City, some Sunderlin, a number of silver pitchers, pink plates, a cup and saucer set with matching teapot, and an assortment of rare vases and pitchers.

Her favorite is a bowl she found on the Isle of Markham. It has eggs in it.

The Landon furniture is stored in their own home in Independence, Kan. Most of it is early American. Mrs. Landon comes by that taste naturally, because her ancestors have been in America since Colonial days.

Her father was a practical man, with a sense of humor. His death in an automobile accident a few years ago was a severe blow to Theo, who had found him a close companion. Her mother, dark-eyed and poised, has the same quick intelligence so noticeable in Mrs. Landon.

When Theo was in school, the Cobbs often went to Colorado for the summer but as Theo was an only child, girl friends were always invited to go along. Mrs. Landon was trying to give her children the same companionship she herself found with her parents.

Nancy Joe looks like Theo at the same age, according to Mrs. Cobb. They are very much alike, she believes.

Mrs. Landon is an excellent cook, her mother says, but since she has been at the governor's mansion, she has had none of it to do.

The governor is fond of homemade bread, so Mrs. Landon set out to learn to make it when they were first married. She made his bread for him until they learned that Daisy also was master of the art.

Tastes Simple

Mrs. Landon supervises the household, assisted by Daisy, the cook; Myrtle Burton, the maid, and Roy Hogan, the chauffeur. Those with the addition of the children's nurse, complete the establishment.

"They are all well trained and manage beautifully," says Mrs. Landon. "I trust them completely. I believe that when you have no reason not to, why the thing to do is to trust people."

Often she answers the phone herself. Life at the mansion runs smoothly as a rule, the three servants working together after eight or ten years in the mansion, and knowing what to expect. From five to 15 extra persons unexpectedly for dinner is nothing new to them.

Neither Governor nor Mrs. Landon often drink coffee. Mrs. Landon, brought up at home on lots of vegetables, follows the same course in the mansion. During summer months she likes buttermilk.

She leaves much of the every-day menue to Daisy, but all formal or planned dinners for guests are arranged by Mrs. Landon.

Mrs. Landon knows quality of merchandise and saleswomen in the Topeka stores report they like to wait on her. Her tastes are simple in clothes, but they are excellent in quality of fabric and workmanship.

For every-day wear she keeps Nancy Jo and Jacky in ordinary little play suits, but for dress they have hand-made brother and sister suits. Mrs. Landon is knitting them matching suit and dress in white.

Pantry Raids

"Peggy Ann selects her own clothes. She knows more what she wants at school. I supervise them, though," she said. "Peggy loves suits . . ."

The governor's disinterest in his clothes distressed her at first. She beamed with pride when his home town delegation from Independence presented him with a new straw hat in honor of his nomination.

"His other hat was in the ring," they said.

The favorite sport among close men friends of the governor's after they have been working late, is to go home and raid the gubernatorial icebox.

The Landons, always reticent about their affairs, are even more so about their personal life. The governor gives his wife credit for her skill and thrift in management. When he insisted that state bills must be slashed and a vigorous economy program be instigated, Mrs. Landon followed the same plan at the mansion.

"She wouldn't want anyone else to do what she wouldn't do herself," he explained.

Although Mrs. Landon declares, "I am not going to take an active part in the campaign, I don't thing it is my place," leadership is not new to her.

During campus days at Washburn College, which she attended during the war, she was active enough in politics to be editor of the college paper and to be president of the Press Club.

After graduation, she worked hard in convincing the national Sorority Delta Gamma that the local sorority she belonged to should become part of the national organization. Succeeding, she served as chairman president for two years in Topeka.

Calm and Poised

Since her marriage, Mrs. Landon has taken an active part in the American Association of University Women and has acted as president of that organization in Topeka.

John N. Landon, the 79-year-old father of the Governor, who takes an alert interest in politics, and who accompanied Peggy to the Republican convention, gives his daughter-in-law the compliment she prizes most highly.

"I like to sit and visit and Theo is one of the finest visitors I ever talked to," he said.

Claim and poised, a gracious hostess, a busy wife and mother, Mrs. Landon serenely faces the busy days ahead which may lead her towards a new home in the White House.

They call him "Lucky Alf."

BOSTON BAND LEADER TO PLAY BRALEY SONG

Midnight tomorrow is the deadline for submitting entries in the "Boondoggle Ballad" contest, and compositions of professional and amateur song composers must be in by that time to be considered for the $100 prize award.

Latest to endorse the contest is Karl Rohde, maestro at the Bradford Hotel Penthouse, who has promised to play the winning selection at his Boston night spot

As in the previous ballad contest, the winner receives a cash award of $100, and the composition is to be sent to New York, where it will compete in the national contest

BALLAD RULES

The Boston American is inviting amateur and professional song composers to write the music for two ballads by Berton Braley.

The writing of this music is a genuine test of skill in musical composition and involves no elements of a game of chance or a lottery. Anyone may compete, whether or not he or she is a regular reader of the Boston American.

A cash prize of $100 will be awarded to the amateur or professional composer who submits what is considered the most appropriate melody for each of the two ballads. The judging will be done by a board of musical experts selected by the Boston American.

The date of the closing of entries for the "Braley Ballad Fest Tour"—one midnight, May 23, and of entries for the second—"A Boondoggle Ballad" is midnight, June 13.

A similar regional contest is being conducted in fifteen other cities by the Hearst newspapers.

After regional prizes have been awarded in each of the cities where the competition is held, the music of each regional winner will be sent to New York City to be judged by a national board of distinguished composers, who will award two national prizes of $100 each for the ballads.

Musical manuscripts entered for regional and national awards will not be returned to the senders. This does not apply to manuscripts of lyrics submitted in the form of their compositions returned and will be privileged to dispose of them in any way they choose, the manuscripts being their exclusive property.

The awards of the regional and national judges selected by the Hearst newspapers will be final and not subject to appeal, this condition being accepted by each contestant prior to submitting music for either ballad.

Skin Troubles Come from Constipation

Constipation is the cause of most complexion troubles. Poisons from the waste matter are picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin.

No one needs to have a sallow, muddy complexion. Proper diet, exercise, surface cleanliness and above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents intestinal poisons that ruin your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without gripings.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Albert F. Hiller • Manager

"WHEN I LOVED YOU"

By Hazel Livingston

"It IS nice to be independent and have one's own money," Dorathea agreed warmly. For the moment she forgot that the routine was getting to be a bore and that Miss Haight, the office manager, had told her that if she didn't want to work there were others only too glad to have her job.

"In a year I can work, too," Jan said. "Maybe in eight or ten months. I wish it were now!"

"Oh, it wouldn't do you any good, you'd let mother take it away from you—every cent you made."

"Do you mean to say—" Ardis was incredulous—"that Aunt Evelyn would take your very own earned money away?"

"Would she? We've had the most awful family fights already over mine. And Jan never puts up a battle. I'm the only one that does."

"Believe me, nobody would take my money if I had any! But then mother wouldn't want to. She never had a cent of her own, you know, and that's why she's so money conscious. She's asking a lot of alimony, you know, and I hope she gets it!"

"But if mother wants to handle Dorathea's money it's just because she has so little and she knows she can do more for all of us that way!"

"All of us. When it's my money!"

"I know. But Dorathea, if you pay board, like you said, and pay for your own carfare and lunches and clothes and everything you won't have nearly as much as if you let mother manage. You know perfectly well you won't!"

"Maybe. I don't care about that. It's the principle of the thing."

"The trouble with all of them," Ardis said, referring to parents, "is that they can't realize their day is over. Aunt Evelyn still thinks she's the only one in the family with sense enough to run things. Heaven knows our family is worse—my immediate family, I mean. But I do think all the Talleys are hipped that way. Look at Aunt Edith, chaperoning those two old maids of hers, and imagining she's a young mother with a couple of girls. When, as a matter of fact she ought to be a grandmother—"

"Ardis, you're awful!"

Won't Wed Half-Wits

They choked and crowed and drank water and Dorathea managed, between giggles to say, "No danger!" at which they all giggled guiltily again.

"As a matter of fact," Ardis said, becomin grown-up and serious again, "I'm the only immediate menace in that direction. For everybody knows Jan won't marry Lowell for a couple of years—"

"If at all!"

"Oh, don't be coy, Jan. I know you aren't officially engaged because you're both too young and it wouldn't be suitable and the Kramers certainly wouldn't do anything unsuitable like letting a son who's in love marry before he's twenty-one."

"But I know—and everybody else knows—that you two will marry eventually. Just as I know that Anne and Alice won't, because they're out of things and they'll never get the chance at anybody they'd have. Of course they ought to get down off their high horses, and—"

"For a child of 17," Dorathea cut in, a little weary of Ardis' precociousness in spite of the scandalous flavor, "you know a lot! When you've been out in the world as I have—"

"Oh, nonsense. I know some things about you, too!"

"What?"

"Oh—things. That you haven't a beau, for one thing. Don't you suppose Aunt Evelyn noted a family session when you threw out Stewey Parker? She couldn't understand it."

"No, she couldn't. Somebody in the social register and I didn't want him. I must be crazy!"

"That's what she said!"

"Well, I had my own reasons for throwing him over and I'm the one that would have had to be the bride, not she. He's funny, I tell you. I'd be afraid of him, really. He does queer things that scare you. But that's all right. They'd let me marry a half-wit if he had cash enough and belonged to the right family. What's more they wouldn't believe he WAS a half-wit until they caught him cutting paper dolls—or worse!"

Jan looked frightened, but Ardis only laughed. "Then what ARE you going to do? No fooling, Dorathea, you're the beauty of the family. We expect things of you."

Dorathea's eyes sparkled. She knew that she was beautiful, but she liked to hear it said.

"Well—that doesn't always help," she said slowly. "A stray bachelor will hang around and invite you to lunch or something, but the ones that really matter have their own closed cliques and they couldn't drag you in if they wanted to. A few people sit up and take notice when they find out you're one of the Talleys, but they don't roll over and die. The family wasn't so important."

"Try to sell that idea to Dad or your mother! Of course you may do well, Dorathea, because you're glamorous looking and Jan had a stroke of luck, but I'm not counting on anything like that."

Dorathea lit a cigargette, leaned forward, her rounded elbows on the table. "What do you mean?"

She was nearly three years older than Ardis, but you couldn't patronize Ardis, she really did know too much.

"Just that I'm not going to marry at all. I've seen too much of it—in the family. Look at Dad making a fool of himself at his age with that ordinary stenographer who's thirty if she's a day! And Aunt Evelyn, thinking she's a romantic figure—"

"Mother's lovely—she IS romantic!" Jan cut in, angrily.

The other two smiled.

"Of course she is," Dorathea said soothingly. "But the point is, she's the last generation and she thinks, poor darling, that she's the new. But what ARE you going to do, Ardis? Work all your life?"

"Yes. Social Service. With time out for travel, and a romance or two."

Dorathea was annoyed. "Nobody with the least sense would even pretend to take you seriously. Let's have some more coffee and then go to a movie."

Ardis just laughed. "All right, darling. Wait and see."

The Kramers were going to leave Mill Valley, and go back to Guatemala to stay.

Aunt Edith had the news first. Fliery heard it in one of the clubs he frquented.

Evelyn, who always scoffed at new ideas, didn't hesitate to scoff at this one. "If it were true, I guess that Lowell would have told Jan before this!"

"You'd think so, wouldn't you?" There was guile in Edith's mild eye.

The two Lyons girls, who had colds and weren't looking their best, exchanged equally meaning glances.

"Maybe he just hates to break the news," Alice said.

And Anne added, "Of course he'll have to leave her."

Chic of Beach Ensemble Captures Congress

NOTHING could more plainly emphasize "It's new! It's 1936!" than ensembling in a beach outfit. And here is one of the most exciting, one of the truly unusual and striking ensembles of the whole season. It is a Fashion Congress winner, modeled by Miss Louise Ranney of Wellesley Farms.

Starfish are woven on the finest, soft jersey—reversing navy and white in suit and coat. Sleek of line, charming as a dance-practice costume, yet rich in effect, is the white jersey suit. Short and full, with box pleats swinging from a straight shoulder yoke in back, the reverse-pattern coat is quite capable of coming off the beach to lend its personality to sports costumes. And did you ever see anything more becoming than the navy linen coolie hat, or the navy and white beach sandals whose toeless, high cut promises all sorts of comfort?

MARRIED COMRADES :-:

By Adele Garrison

HAL'S LOVE FOR KATHERINE WAS SACRIFICED

CHAPTER 35

THE MAGIC mirror of Katherine's eyes still held its potency. It was but the fraction of a minute that her gaze was upon me, yet years of memories of her romantic but unhappy life were rushing past me.

And chief among those memories was that of the first appearance of Hal Meredith at the farm house, and his amazement, palpably mixed with a deeper feeling, when he saw Katherine for the first time in years.

It was not until a long time afterward, when Katherine stood in the shadow of tragedy, that I learned the secret of the emotion which he betrayed at he sight of the beautiful woman who met him with smiling and perfect poise.

NOT FORMALLY ENGAGED

Hal Meredith had been wildly, passionately in love with Katherine in the days of their hospital association. There was no formal engagement, for he would ask no woman to marry him until he was ready to support her, yet Katherine had every reason to suppose that when he did achieve—not financial independence—but a livelihood, he would claim her. Then he suddenly had married Lucia Havens, daughter of an old and distinguished alienist upon the staff, and Katherine had met the situation with smiling, regal dignity that gave no hint of the knife thrust in her heart.

There was only the memory of that old wound left in Katherine's life when Hal Meredith's path again crossed hers, but it was not long before we realized that whatever the reason for Hal Meredith's marriage, his heart still and always had been in Katherine's sole possession.

EVIDENCE DESTROYED

It was through no weakness, no indiscretion upon Hal Meredith's part that our realization had come, but from the tragedy which had followed Lucia Meredith's renewed acquaintance with Katherine.

For Lucia Meredith was insane, though no one save her father, now dead, and her husband had suspected it. And her insanity burst into sudden flame when she met again the woman of whom she always had been jealous.

A shiver ran down my spine as I remembered the horrible form which that insanity of Lucia Meredith's had taken, a pretended affection and dependence upon Katherine, an appeal that she nurse her through an illness, and then—Lucia's suicide, leaving cunningly contrived evidence that Katherine was responsible for her death.

By the merest chance, we, who loved Katherine, had managed to destroy that evidence, to establish irrefutably her innocence, if ever it should be questioned in the future, and to shield her from suspicion or publicity. But the experience, I know, had left a scar upon her sensibilities that had taken a long time to erase.

Hal Meredith went abroad immediately after the tragedy, remained there for a year, before he wrote to Katherine. But before he left, he cleared up the mystery which had surrounded his marriage to Lucia, revealing that it had been no sordid desire for advancement in his profession—which Lucia's father had given him—that actuated him, but a chivalrous sacrificial impulse in answer to a broken plea upon the part of the distinguished old alienist, his sponsor and benefactor for many years.

DEATH A BLESSING

With the cunning of madness, Lucia had told her father that she faced motherhood because of her brief infatuation for a married man, and begged him to get someone to marry her and save her the revelation of her criminal folly.

She knew very well that Hal was the only man to whom her father would turn, and after their marriage she taunted Hal with the clever way she had deceived her father with a plea which had no foundation, and so had won the man whom she had loved in her insane fashion for years, and whom she had despaired of getting in any ordinary way.

Because he owed everything to Lucia's father, he not only had made the first sacrifice of giving up Katherine, whom he adored, and marrying the old alienist's daughter, but he had given Lucia a fidelity and kindliness which would have been the portion of a loved wife. Only himself and his God knew how blessed must have been the release of her death.

But it had come too late. His early love, the only love of his life, was bound in marriage to a man whom she apparently loved with all her heart.

But the keen perception of Hal Meredith had not missed the neglect which was Katherine's portion, and I was sure that he also had seen the weakening of affection which such treatment must inevitably bring. He had returned to press an ardent suit upon Katherine, which, I guessed, coupled with the memory of her first romance, had more than once brought her the temptation to exchange the misery of her present lot for the glamorous haven which Hall Meredith's love offered her.

It was my psychic comprehension of this secret inclination of hers which made me answer her scathing question steadily.

MADGE ANSWERS KATHERINE

"Yes, Katherine, I was hoping that Hal Meredith could make you forget the treatment that Jack has given you," I said. "Forgive me, if I say that I believe you have been cherising that hope against all your instincts and your sense of duty to Jack."

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WITH THE SVELTE silhouette the pattern for figures, all ladies think they weigh too much, and with a reckless disregard for structure, they convert curves into extreme lines. It is possible that you have already reduced far enough, but, like Ogden Nash, we wonder:

"—If there is a woman in the world strong-minded enough to shed ten pounds or twenty,
"And say: There now, that's plenty."

Don't let your determination run away with you. If a little is good, more is not always perfect in reducing. Regardless of the 1936 ideal, structure continues to be your measuring stick for weight, and the most important factor in every figure program is that normal weight varies with structural type.

There are two types of individuals who look and feel better above their normal weight, and you may be one of them. If your ancestors willed you a large frame, you make your best appearance with weight above the average normal. No amount of diet and exercise can change your frame, and extreme dieting with this type individual produces a gaunt, hungry look. Nothing could be more disastrous.

Curvesome Type

Or, perhaps you were designed for pleasing plumpness. The stocky individual is carrying things too far when she strives to alter curves to ultra-slimness. This curvesome type is likely to be the prettier for a little extra weight.

If you are five feet four with a wide frame, you may have your best figure a 135 pounds; and if you are five feet seven with a big frame, you can get away with 150 pounds. Three weights are a generous contrast to the beauticians' rule of 120 pounds of streamlines for five feet four, or the tall, willowy silhouette of 135 pounds ane emaciation.

Structure Demands

When you disregard structure in reducing, you also disregard health, and health is the prerequisite of a good figure. You may not put your health ahead of your figure, but you will always, as long as you are Eve's daughter, put your looks first, and beauty and health are parallel.

However, there is one thing which you Junonesque and stocky girls must keep in mind. Flabby fat is never flattering to any figure. Your high normal weight level does not entitle you to the hefty arms and heavily padded shoulders which often mar these two types. You may not need to take off more weight, but you do need to keep your muscles in tone with exercise. Beauty is fit, not fat.

Be satisfied to remove enough weight and quit. This may be five pounds, ten pounds, twenty, or not any, according to your structural limitations.

"Exercises for the upper arms and shoulders" will help you get rid of that unwanted surplus padding. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ida Jean Kain, in care of this newspaper.

Modern Canning Methods

RIGHT NOW is canning time.

Can strawberries for sauce. Make sun-preserves or strawberry and rhubarb jam. Fill jars with juice for fruit punch or sirup for puddings.

For the beautiful sun-preserves, in which the berries become transparent as gems, hull, wash and drain two quarts of ripe, perfect strawberries. Place them in a preserving kettle in layers of berries and sugar, using two quarts of sugar. Add juice of one lemon, let stand a half hour. Heat slowly to boiling point, cook five minutes. Pour into shallow pans and cover each with a sheet of glass, as shown in sketch. Set in hot sun three days, stirring gently two or three times a day. Turn into small, sterilized glasses and seal with paraffin.

Do you know the "teapot trick" with paraffin? Melt it in a small, enameled teapot. Then it's easy to pour paraffin onto preserves, no burnt fingers, and you can easily remelt paraffin in teapot.

Many fruits hold their shape better if canned by the cold-pack method. Full instructions for this method.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, New Ways of Canning Fruits, Vegetables and Meats, to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

'Understanding' Old Maid Out-Vamps the Vamp, Reader Declares

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The husband-snatcher, Mrs. X. tells me all about today, and what she says is right to the point.

Loser in love; winner in wisdom, Mrs. X. bears no malice, realizing, of course, that a "rudderless" husband isn't much better than a ship in the same condition.

Thoughtful women and girls will read Mrs. X.'s letter; their husbands and brothers, also. For the husband-snatcher menace is universal, each "snatcher" employing the same tactics, all proceeding according to the same formula.

"I knew John was seeing a lot of Jane," Mrs. X. says, "but I never dreamed there was anything serious between them. She was too plain, too 'fortiesh," I told myself. Surely John, if tired of me, would seek a younger, prettier woman. There, I made my mistake.

"Jane's bad looks were her trump card. Wise enough to realize she could never vamp a man, or be accused of trying to, she resorted to a system employed with success by women of her type from the beginning of time. She became an 'understanding soul,' bubbling over with sympathy, actually effervescent with honeyed words. It was too much; John couldn't and didn't resist.

"They couldn't see me, but I saw them. It was that night in the off-the-road inn. There they sat, the two of them. He was telling her about me. I was wasteful, extravagant, crazed by mother-love, ignorant of the duties of a wife. Selfishness, pettiness, down-right meanness—they went into the bargain. Yes, all and all, I was a pretty poor excuse for a woman.

"And by his side she sat, this husband-snatching Jane. Not a word out of her. Not a flicker of a smile. Only her head moving up and down, with maddening regularity. Nodding, nodding—I thought she'd never stop. Of course, it could not occur to me, then, that listening to my husband, doing rather well by himself, was wiser, more flattering to male vanity than any addition she could possibly make to his indictment of me.

THE SAME STORY

"Later, I saw them again. The same story—he talking; she listening and nodding. And, believe it or not, she finally nodded herself into his life, and me out.

"My life ruined, at least badly damaged, I find myself habitually observing women like Jane. To my great surprise, I have found them, almost without exception, faded, unattractive creatures who, unable to win a man fairly, resort to foul punches. Their universal ability to profess an 'understanding' of all male woes is the glove with which they go battering their way through more fortunate women's hearts and homes.

"How can I win back my husband; what can I do to open his eyes to the terrible deception to which he has fallen victim? Frankly, I neither care nor know. He is lost to me, forever. All the love I once held for him is dead. He is welcome to her; she to him.

"Obviously, therefore, this letter is not for advice; rather, to give advice. I want wives, young and old, to realize the symptoms, to be ready to act if and whenever the Janes, the husband-snatchers, the 'other women'—call them what you may—present themselves and begin the démarge.

"MRS. X."

MY DEAR FRIEND:

I appreciate your interesting letter; my readers will, too. Your description of husband-snatching women is true — too true, I fear. Usually "fortiesh," not infrequently fat and homely, they worm their way into men's hearts by methods more attractive and gifted women would scorn as beneath them.

Pretty women and good-looking girls, wisely, do not run after married men. For them, there is a sufficiency of "good catches" in the bachelor class, and they proceed accordingly. They know that their God-given attractions desire a man's ALL, not the fraction the woman he married doesn't claim.

The beauty contest winner has her plans laid for a good marriage. There are the exceptions. She wants a home of her own—wholly her own. Able to make a choice from many men, she doesn't need have to chase the second-hand, shop-worn article.

Less fortunate, the man-mad, disillusioned spinster is quite another matter.

Yes, I agree with you, Mrs. X., the blonde and beautiful rival isn't the most deadly; it is the "understanding" one.

Beauty in Business

By DONNA GRACE

THE QUESTION of make-up for business or professional women, we believe should be a matter of personal taste.

We are frequently asked whether it is correct for a girl in an office to make-up, and the answer is: It depends on the surroundings and the type of girl whether or not make-up is used.

We know of one large international corporation where all women employees are not only forbidden to make-up, but they are told they must not even bring it into the building for their own personal powdering at the end of the day. This same firm requires all women employees to wear smocks while on duty.

It is the privilege of any employer to regulate the manners and uniform of its workers, but unless a real uniform is necessary we believe the manner of dress and attire should be a personal matter.

Any girl who is smart enough to hold any position of importance or even a minor office job is capable of making herself attractive without a too-conspicuous make-up, and the rule should be, to use powder and just a suggestion of eye make-up and very dainty and neat outline of lipstick. The lipstick must be done so sparingly that it looks like natural coloring, and no cheek rouge, unless one is unusually colorless. Then a little powdered rouge is correct.

The average professional woman, except the trained nurse, may use make-up according to fashion's dictates. The nurse should avoid the use of all decided make-up, but if she will just be subtle about it, she can apply a lovely make-up base and powder without detection. Then the eyes may be touched up ever so lightly. The brows must not be done with mascara, as this is always noticeable. Dull pencil may be used lightly to give them a smoky color. Mascara may be used on the lashes, but use it almost dry and leave only a faint coloring.

You may have my Make-up Chart for your guide, if you will enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Taxing Workers' Pay

Social Security Political Sham

Editor's Note: This is the seventh of a series of articles analyzing the provisions of the Social Security Act and showing what it will eventually do to workers' pay.

By R. P. ELLIS
Industrial Economist

Right here, to get this matter clearly before you, let me explain what the administration spokesmen say it is proposed to do with the moneys you wage earners and your employers are to be taxed, and which you may think is buying a pension for you in your old age.

Ordinarily, when a pension system is installed to which workers contribute, cash reserves have to be set up so as to make sure the money is there when each workers reaches the pension age.

No insurance company or other financial institution, entrusted with the care of these funds, would be permitted to dissipate them: they would have to be set aside and invested so that, with the accumulations of interest, a sufficient fund is on hand for each pensioner as he reaches retirement age.

In regular pension systems the amount of this fund is set at something over 10 times the annual pension to begin at age 65. Thus if you are to receive $500 a year, the reserve fund would have to amount to over $5000, accumulated for you by the time you reach 65 years.

Now you can readily understand that if Uncle Sam collects payments to set up pensions on over 25,000,000 wage earners, the reserve fund, if set up, would gradually reach a stupendous amount.

One very able analysis of the Social Security Act reserve fund requirements shows that it would ultimately reach 47 billion dollars ($47,000,000,000).

Now the spokesmen for the administration say that Uncle Sam could not handle so much money, so they think it best that very little, if any, real reserves should be set up.

They propose to take the money you pay in, and the money your employer pays 'n on your behalf, AND SPEND IT; and when it comes your turn, years from now, to draw a pension you will have to rely upon the collections of payroll taxes at that future time to get it.

Taxing the Young

Realizing, no doubt, that this outrageous procedure must be cloaked over somehow, it is proposed to have the Secretary of the Treasury estimate each year what the reserve fund really ought to have in it.

So the act provides for the creation of an account in the Treasury of the United States to be known as the "Old Age Reserve Account."

But what will this "account" contain? It will contain a bundle, a very large bundle, of the government's PROMISES of future payment.

And when and by whom are these promises to be kept? By the wage earners of 15 to 20 years from now.

There are over 30 million persons of working age today in this country who are 30 YEARS OLD OR LESS. This act taxes over half of the jobs open to them. Let us call them the YOUNG WORKERS. It will be 35 years before the first of them will reach the pension age of 65.

But by then we shall already have over 15,000,000 persons of pension age, and the cost of the pensions will be running between $500 and $1000 a year each. And every year thereafter the numbers will increase!

So the cost will average 10 billion dollars a year when the young workers of today are drawing the pensions they start paying for in 1937.

The only way workers in the near or distant future will ever get the pensions they start paying for in 1937 will be for the Congress each year to make the appropriation. No appropriation, no pension, no matter how long or how much your pay has been taxed!

To call this act a "Social Security" measure is a misnomer. Worse, it is an insult to the intelligence of the workers of America! By this device the spendthrift politicians will get their hands upon ever increasing amounts of money wrung from the hardest working people throughout the country, 40 per cent of whom could not earn enough even in 1929 to support their families "in decency and health."

The Roosevelt administration has refused, with a great show of righteous indignation, to lower the base (starting point) of INCOME taxes, so as to include more persons with smaller incomes.

But under the smoke screen of a "box-office" title their "Social Security" act reaches out and taxes every dollar of even the most meager earnings.

SECURITY for whom?

The politicians get the "security"—their jobs depend upon their having plenty of other people's money to spend. The workers get their pay taxed, their wages reduced, the prices they pay for things raised and their jobs threatened through the enforced installation of labor-saving machinery.

And this is Mr. Roosevelt's "No. 1 must" measure in his whole program for the "forgotten man!"

Politicians' Game

If anyone rises to protest against this proposal to filch the savings of workers, he is immediately pilloried as "a man so heartless that he attacks the care of the blind, the crippled, the sick, the penniless, the old people and helpless children."

Why drag these in? Their care should have nothing to do with payroll taxes. Earnest advocates of genuine security programs begged the Administration to provide for these worthy unfortunates in a separate law and not confuse the issue.

But our astute politicians at Washington saw too good a chance to use little children, and these others so worthy of our sympathy and aid, as a smoke-screen for a huge tax program against workers' pay.

And what did these Dealers in Billions do for them? The Social Security Act appropriated as "grants in aid":

Needy dependent children	$24,750,000
Promoting health of mothers and children	3,800,000
Crippled children	2,850,000
Child Welfare services	1,500,000
Privately incapacitated	1,935,000
Public Health work	8,000,000
Investigation into diseases	2,000,000
	$44,835,000

A 45-million dollar smoke screen for billions of taxation of workers' pay!

Truly, historians will characterize the strategy and the acts of the Roosevelt Administration as THE GREAT DECEPTION!

3 Hurt Trying Out New Auto

Ernest T. Viano, owner of the Concord Motor Car Co., of Concord, decided he would give his son, William, and daughter, Lillian, a treat by taking them for a spin in the newest and most expensive car in his show rooms.

As they were passing through Burlington today a car operated by John A. Curry, 54, of Northampton street, Boston, collided with Viano's car. The three Vianos were slightly injured.

Curry was held by State Trooper Donat Lacorse of Andover Barracks for a hearing today in Woburn district court on auto charges.

FAVOR ARMING DARDANELLES

Montreux, Switzerland, June 22 (INS)—Eventual accession to Turkey's demands for refortification of the Dardanelles was predicted as representatives of nine signatories to the Straits convention met here today.

Progress towards abolition of the demilitarized zone is expected after the League of Nations meetings this week. British leadership in lifting anti-Italian sanctions at Geneva will have an important bearing on the Dardanelles and Mediterranean problems.

Jap Ship Fired On by Chinese

Tientsin, June 22 (US)—Friction between Japan and China attained dangerous intensity when it was reported here that a Chinese customs cruiser had fired upon a Japanese ship, wounding two members of the latter's crew.

At the same time additional fuel was poured into the fires of the Far East crisis when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, dictator of the Central China government at Nanking, delivered a sharp ultimatum to the insurgent Kwangsi province leaders, warning them to evacuate Hunan province or assume the risk of a civil war.

COLLUSION LAID TO 4 FIRMS

Washington, June 22 (US)—Calling for "appropriate action," President Roosevelt has referred to Attorney General Cummings a Federal Trade Commission report charging foir great steel companies have engaged in collusive bidding on government contracts, the commission announced.

The report found there was "reasonable ground to believe that the anti-trust laws have been violated," and recommended the action taken by the President.

The concerns are the United States Steel Corporation, the Jones and McLaughlin Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Inland Steel Company. They are alleged to have submitted identical bids on steel piling for three construction projects financed by the Public Works Administration.

DAVE EGAN TELLS ABSORBING STORY OF MAX SCHMELING'S LIFE

Turn to Page 15, Sports Section

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Not being a sports writer I have no alibis to offer on the presumably rather bitter subject of the amazing upset which occurred in New York on Friday evening.

I am willing to put myself on record, however, as saying that, like every professional fight expert whose stories I have read, I had no doubt whatever that Joe Louis would win, not necessarily hands down but hands up and slugging lethally.

One New York sports writer wrote at considerable length a kind of grisly parody on "The Last Days of a Condemned Man." The execution of Schmeling had been postponed one day, but there was no expectation of a reprieve. The condemned had eaten his usual hearty breakfast. He was ready to walk the "last long mile." The impassive executioner was ready to do his job on the following day. And so forth and so on.

Feels Sorry For Man Who Wrote Article

It struck me when I read it as in singularly bad taste, but it didn't occur to me to question the basic premise. As I glanced over it again, shortly after the broadcast from the ringside signed off, I felt rather sympathetic with the man who wrote it. In the light of subsequent events it was such a terrible gaffe, as the French say, the sort of thing for which a man ought to go on apologizing to himself till doomsday.

It is bad enough to guess wrong in public, even with the entire sporting fraternity of the country making it unanimous, but such an elaborate piece of horrid fun is hard to live down.

I have habitually a low-lying inner sense of skepticism in these matters, which should have warned me. It is purely instinctive, somewhat fatalistic, and it is based on the Greek tradition that the gods do not encourage men to bet on sure things. The Greeks had a word for it. They called it Nemesis, the idea being that when men depend too much on past performances, are too universally sure in their own minds, the gods are likely to upset the apple cart.

Hunch Loses Out To Reasoning

This would seem to apply not only to the sports experts of the United States but to the humiliated Joe Louis, as well. As I say, I should have had that inner hunch which in time past has occasionally made me inwardly dubious of sure things. But this time it would have gone against all reason, against experience, past performances, universal agreement, and, probably, national pride. Reason conquered and the hunch didn't even have a look in.

None of us, I fancy, can properly evaluate how and when and to what degree the spirit can triumph over the body. If we have considered a moment what was likely to be the effect of the tremendous ballyhoo for Louis which had been poured on the head of Schmeling for so many weeks, one might have thought twice. The man had once held the championship. He had lost it under not particularly glorious conditions. He was the idol of his people in whom the question of national pride is very sore and very acute.

Much of the comment on his training had been essentially unfavorable. His pride must have been humiliated, at the very least bitterly on the defensive. These, I take it, are the conditions which might be supposed to screw the courage to the sticking point. And he did not fail!

Bad For Any Man Never to Fail

As for Louis, it cannot be good for a man never to fail. It cannot be good to be constantly fighting inferior men. It must be worse constantly to be the recipient of the kind of praise Louis has had ladled out to him for a year. Serene self-confidence based on a complete knowledge of the situation from every angle is one thing. What Joe Louis had, I fancy, was something else again, harder to understand and define. Anyway, it failed him, probably more to his surprise than to that, even, of his most enthusiastic critical backers.

To a listener-in it does not seem possible that there should be any alibis. The finish was decisive. Louis' fouls were deemed unintentional and were courteously forgiven. They did not affect the result. The fighting was obviously hard, honest, and sincere. Each contestant gave his very best all the time. After some of the more sorry recent exhibitions pretending to be heavyweight championship contests, this one was thoroughly satisfactory. It cannot help but bring back some of the old excitement.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood's Prettiest? Folks Say Olivia de Havilland

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the sixteenth story in a series of intimate glimpses into the life of filmland's capital—"ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD." Miss Marsters is being given entree to all of the studios, and is writing her stories from behind the scenes in the land of make-believe. These stories will appear daily.

By ANN MARSTERS

Hollywood, Calif., June 22—Who's the prettiest girl in Hollywood?

Ask the first man you happen to meet around the Warner Brothers studio and he'll answer promptly:

"Olivia de Havilland."

When I saw her, I knew why so many people said that. There are undoubtedly other women in Hollywood more smoothly beautiful, more glamorous—but for sheer, sparkling prettiness, I don't think Olivia de Havilland can be surpassed.

She has such a girlish, natural smile that you like her instantly—and because of her prettiness, you'd find it very difficult to keep your eyes off her.

Olivia was sitting on the raft at Sherwood Lake where Warner Brothers are making "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

Her long, full dress was damp and torn around the hem. Her feet were bare, and her shoes were beside her—wet and full of mud.

"I've been in Sherwood lake all morning," she explained, "and Errol Flynn has been rescuing me. He's so strong and brave and noble—aren't you, Errol?"

College Ambition Passed Gaily By

She looked up at Flynn with a teasing twinkle in her eyes.

"I certainly am," he said. "And incidentally, you have very pretty feet."

Little Miss de Havilland turned up her nose. "I don't like flatterers," she said. "Men who flatter women can't be trusted."

Said Flynn: "Little girls shouldn't have such opinions."

Olivia giggled (she is only eighteen) and from then on, she ignored the audacious Mr. Flynn. (But I saw her stretching her toes in the sunlight — perhaps to see just how pretty they really were.)

"Isn't it strange how things turn out," she said at last. "Here I am a movie actress—and only a year ago I had my life all mapped out in an entirely different way.

"I had every reason to believe that I would go to college—and I was so thrilled when I won a scholarship, in high school, to Mills College here in California."

That, she thought, was a very wonderful thing to happen to any girl — but Olivia's case presents one of those rare examples, where such incredibly "wonderful" things happen so suddenly, that a little high school girl can wake up to find herself a bright star in the Hollywood skies.

Then Came Fame With Big Chance

Olivia lived with her mother in Saratoga, California—a little town of 800 population, nestling in the Santa Cruz mountains. It was there that she went to high school, and, on the eve of her graduation, was presented with the coveted scholarship.

Something else happened on that same evening. A friend introduced her to Max Reinhardt.

She knew that Reinhardt was then preparing to produce "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Hollywood Bowl. She was so glowingly enthusiastic about it, that Reinhardt told her she might go to Hollywood and look in at the rehearsals.

"So of course, I came to Hollywood," she said, "and spent most of my time at the Bowl. Gloria Stuart was rehearsing the role of Hermia, and her understudy was Jeanne Rouveral.

"Both Gloria and Jeanne were as sweet as they could be to me, and we all became very good friends. I hadn't ever thought of being an actress, but I helped Jeanne rehearse her lines, and I began to take an interest in the part of Hermia. From working with Jeanne, I managed to memorize all Hermia's lines."

Then, a few weeks before the opening date, Gloria Stuart had to leave the cast to play an important role in a picture. Jeanne Rouveral became the first Hermia—and Olivia de Havilland became her understudy.

You can probably guess what happened next. Jeanne, too, was offered a role that she didn't feel she could afford to turn down—so Reinhardt said:

"You try it, Olivia."

Olivia read the lines, she got the part, and when it was all over, Reinhardt himself said that he had never directed a Hermia as lovely and so capable as this little California girl.

Funny Haircut Snips Love, Too

That was the end of Olivia's college ambitions. Warner Brothers signed her to a 5-year contract.

She has appeared in three pictures, so far, "Alibi Ike," with Joe E. Brown; "The Irish In Us," and "Captain Blood," with Errol Flynn.

Now—she is sitting on a raft in the middle of Sherwood Lake, making her fourth picture, "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

"And just think," she said, "it all came about by a chance meeting followed by a series of accidents. I feel, now, as though I have just begun to really live. Nothing exciting ever happened to me before."

Nothing at all?

"Well," she said, smiling, "I fell in love once. But he went away."

And never came back?

"Yes—he came back—but he was wearing a bow tie and he had a funny haircut."

What kind of a haircut?

"It was short," she said.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

Out on a raft in the middle of Sherwood Lake in California, Olivia de Havilland—"the prettiest girl in the movies"—told Ann Marsters how she happened to be there, and what her ideal of a man must be and do. Errol Flynn lounged near. They were making "The Charge of the Light Brigade," this girl of 18 and the dashing young star. Olivia, in her imaginary ideal man, tabooes too-short haircuts, black shoes with brown suits, bow ties, a superior attitude. She went from high school to stardom—almost in one step—and she has made good in a big way.

Vari-Colored Hair Coming Fashion

Gentlemen aside, blondes are in luck this summer.

Their hair, say beauticians, is better adapted than brunettes to tinting all shades to match their gowns, and varied-hued hair is the coming style.

The beauty specialists were back in their home towns today applying the tinting art, which they discussed yesterday at the semi-annual convention of the Massachusetts Cosmetologists and Hairdressers Association at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

WPA JOB BOOST HERE DENIED

Reports that Works Progress Administration officials were seeking to increase the state quota to 350,000 jobs were branded as absolutely false today by Paul Edwards, state administrator.

From Edwards it was learned the present quota set-up in the state is the same as first revealed in the Boston Evening American two weeks ago.

On June 15 a cut was made, making the state Works Progress Administration employes number about 94,000. Between June 15 and June 30 another cut of between 2000 and 4000 will be made. About 90,000 persons is expected to be the employment figure during the summer months.

King Edward VIII 42 Tomorrow

London, June 22 (US) Final preparations have been made for the royal party's obsequies tomorrow of King Edward's 42d birthday anniversary.

Outside of court circles the event will be celebrated with varied private and public functions.

Forsaking for that one day the rigorous duties of kingship to which Edward has dedicated himself with yeomanly zeal, the King will devote his birthday morning to attendance at a trooping of the colors ceremony.

Then at noon he will join his widowed mother, dowager Queen Mary, and other members of the royal family at a private luncheon in Buckingham Palace. In the evening a dinner party for Edward's intimate friends will be held at York House, followed by movies.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

Hollywood, Calif., June 22—Hollywood can get itself all worked up over the strangest things. The latest is—a quest for camels.

There are 21 camels in and about Los Angeles, both the one bump and the two bump variety. Of these, eight are too "mean" to be used in closeups. The property men at the studios have their names down in red ink in their books — which means that these particular camels are likely to take an actor's arm off in a single bite.

ANN MARSTERS

This leaves 13 camels which, in recent weeks, have had to be divided among five different productions: "Under Two Flags," "Garden of Allah," "The Good Earth," "Charge of the Light Brigade," and the Wheeler-Woolsey comedy, "Mummy's Boy."

All 21 of the camels have been used in "Under Two Flags," much to the annoyance of the Hollywood horses that simply don't like camels and won't even learn to like them.

The other four studios are arguing among themselves about which is going to use the camels next—and the camel owners are having a fine time.

Twenty-five dollars a day is the sum paid for each camel; $25 a day for a camel handler, and another $10 a day for an additional trainer for every three camels used.

So if you happen to have a camel, you'd better take it to Hollywood.

History Repeats Again; Flagg Paints Norma

Norma Shearer was an artist's model before she became a star, and one of the first for whom she posed in New York was James Montgomery Flagg.

Flagg is now visiting Hollywood and he asked Norma to pose for him in her "Juliet" costume. Norma did.

Shirley Temple went to the movies the other afternoon at Hollywood's famous "Chinese Theatre."

At the theatre entrance, a terrific crowd gathered around her, and police were busy trying to keep spectators back of the ropes.

A worried man touched a policeman's shoulder.

"I want to get through," he said. "I'm Shirley's father."

"Sure," said the officer scornfully, "And I'm Mary Queen of Scots."

The man raised his voice and called:

"Shirley!"

"Yes, Daddy," answered Shirley, looking quickly around.

"Stand aside, Queen Mary," ordered Mr. George Temple as he elbowed his way to Shirley's side.

Science Proves It's Grand in Films

The marvels that can be accomplished on a sound stage are very well illustrated, I think, by this bit of information I have just obtained.

Suppose, for instance, that an orchestra is used in a scene. If a single instrument—say, a violin—is a little bit "off," the whole scene does not need to be re-taken.

The sound department can cut out the violin part, have it played separately, and put back into perfect co-ordination with the rest of the orchestra.

Opera Star Rosa Ponselle visited Joan Crawford on the set of "The Gorgeous Hussy." When she was leaving, Ponselle said to Joan (who has ambitions for opera herself):

"I'd love to hear you sing, and if you wish, I will help you with your music."

HEARD ABOUT HOLLYWOOD—Stuart Erwin, who has played seven newspaper reporter roles in films, visited a newspaper plant in Los Angeles the other day. The smell of the ink in the pressroom made him feel so dizzy he had to leave . . . Harold Lloyd is signing a new contract as Paramount producer to make his own films . . . Maureen O'Sullivan got homesick and called Ireland by telephone to invite her mother, father and two sisters to Hollywood. They accepted and will arrive next month . . . Eleanor Powell says she prefers the word "hoofer" to "dancer" because it has more significance to one who has tapped up from the ranks.

DANNO-YVON REFEREE SELECTED

AUSTEN LAKE

Apology for Slander, Retort Courteous To Prize Fight Bigots

EVER SINCE THIS PROPERLY penitent phrase-maker picked Joe Louis to blast Max Schmeling into a home for punch-goofy martyrs of the prize ring, the fight bigots have been mailing in screams which vary from "Anathema, sir, Anathema" to "Listen mugg, I seen where you said in the paper . . ." and "Dear Sir, you louse." These are warranted and justifiable criticisms in view of the terrific hammering Max handed the brown boy. But, on the evidence offered in the training camps of the two, I would write the same opinions all over again and choose Louis to knock Max little short of silly. And so would every other sport author who has an ounce of athletic learning.

Austen Lake

Schmeling fought a stout-hearted battle against two opponents and whipped both, brown Louis and black despair. He trained in an atmosphere of defeatist propaganda in a camp where not a man conceded him to have a chance, including his own sparring partners.

The afternoon following his final workout, two of these spar mates were sitting in the Napanoch canteen. They had drawn their last wages, had their luggage packed and were waiting for the train bus. And I [illegible] said Max was a pitiful pushover, a sucker for a left and a one-punch fighter who threw his right like a fork ful of hay.

"I ain't a great fighter," said one, "but I can tag Maxie any time I want, so you can imagine what a guy like Louis will do to him." They were wrong.

FROM HERO TO BUM IN 40 MINUTES

THE NIGHT OF THE FIGHT, when Schmeling and Louis were sitting on their ring stools fitting on their russet fight mittens, the announcer blurted his introductions into a microphone suspended from the ceiling of the platform. He introduced Schmeling tersely, mentioning his courage, and then went into a windy eulogy of Louis, terming him one of the "marvels of fistiana," whose astounding record of knockouts "assured him of immortality." It was no accident by inference he spoke the minds of the 50,000 witnesses who sat in the gloaming sure they were about to see Schmeling slaughtered by inches.

For [illegible] knees and hung briefly on the strands in the attitude of a sin-sick penitent before sliding into semi-consciousness on the pit of his stomach, a sudden reversion of feeling swept the crowd, the reporters, and possibly the nation. Suddenly the "marvel of histany" [illegible] bum, jeered by the people as he was trundled up the aisles like a limp hammock.

And ringside wisemen began to tell what a sucker he was for that simple-[illegible] He was a fraud, they said, imposing on the people. He had an alabaster jaw and a craven heart. The big, bad wolf, they said, was just a timid schoolboy.

LOUIS BELIEVED HIS OWN LEGEND

IT IS ONLY ONE MAN'S OPINION, but I still think Louis is the world's No. 1 fist fighter and that, ultimately, he will be champion. And, while giving Schmeling the utmost credit for a crafty, courageous battle which has stirred the imagination of the white races of the world, I believe that Louis' failure traces to his having been pampered by the press and the hero-worshipping Blacks who swarmed his Lakewood camp, and that the super-man legend grew in his primitive mind until he believed he was invincible and could glare a man down by the sheer magnetism of his shoe-button eyes. He looked lazy, loggy and cocky in the ring last Friday and fenced with a high-chinned disdain during the first three rounds.

And when, suddenly, he caught a full roundhouse shot on that region of his jaw known as the lug, his wits went fuzzy and stayed that way for the rest of the night.

STANDS AT THE CROSSROADS

ONE MISTAKE LOUIS' HANDLERS will never make again is to plant him in a jazz hotel training site, where the hot mammas and licorice dudes of Harlem can butter him over with hallelujahs. There was a cellar taproom at Lakewood, where the colored peacocks drank their drams and strutted to a jungle-drum orchestra, and where Louis went often to sit with Negro stage celebrities like Ethel Waters, the blues singer, and listen to songs of his heroism.

And don't think that the Whites didn't fawn over him, too.

Journalists haunted his cottage as intimate pals. National notables posed for press photos with arms linked affectionately into his. And the 22-year-old kid from the cotton fields, who went to a school for backward children in his early youth, got inflated notions of his own dignity. And when he went into the ring he moved with the majesty of an important personage, until Schmeling whacked his distinguished chin with a windmill clout that spattered perspiration over the press rows.

So now, battered and with a jaw swollen like an eggplant, the Negro stands at the crossroads of his career. If he has the proper spunk he will learn his lesson and start thinking of himself again as a fighter rather than a personage. And his co-manager, Julian Black, told me afterwards that henceforth, when he trains for his next fight, he will be in a secluded spot, remote from the glamour of Harlem glory-hawkers, and work in the woods amid surroundings sympathetic to his primitive nature.

Meanwhile Hed Schmeling, giving him a full measure of credit for the greatest display of nerve since Braddock beat Baer, I offer apologies for reviling him as a hollow shell, because he has a heart as big as a footbal. And I will close by remarking that anybody who picked him to win Friday's fight on the basis of training comparisons had leanings toward lunacy.

RAIN Halts British OPEN

Hoylake, Eng., June 22 (AP)—A terrific thunderstorm today forced postponement of qualifying round play in the British open golf championship.

The storm broke after Henry Cotton, British ace and 1934 champion, had posted a 67 over the Wallasey course, breaking the course record by one stroke

This great performance, as well as all other scores turned in before the downpour, was cancelled by the tournament committee which ordered a new start tomorrow

Ball Satisfied

Of the American delegation [illegible] headed by Gene Sarazen, [illegible] Frank Ball of Tannersville, N. Y., had completed the first possible round of the 36-hole qualifying competition and he was just as well satisfied that the cancellation was ordered

Playing Wallasey favorit, Ball posted an 82, taking 41 each way Ball arrived only Sunday after 10 days on ship and was far off his game

"My putts just wouldn't go down," Ball commented ruefully after he had completed his round

Mixed Foursome Title to Oakley

It was a case of revenge with golf clubs today for Mrs. Edward H. Baker and Ed Peterson of Oakley, with Mrs. Willie Howard and Wm. Cobb of Charles River, the victims.

The Baker-Peterson duo won the stats club pairs mixed foursome championship on the 19th green at Dedham Country Club. They thereby reversed a situation which saw Mrs. Howard and Cobb take the title from them in the 1934 final.

Dykes Signs Again

Chicago, June 22—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox has signed a contract to manage the team during the 1937 season. It is understood that the contract calls for a substantial wage increase.

Wide Interest

Danno O'Mahony's defense of his world's heavyweight wrestling championship against Yvon Robert tomorrow night is attracting the attention of all Ireland.

No less than 10 prominent Irish newspapers will receive a move-by-move account of the match via cable. They are the Irish Independent, Irish Press and Dublin Herald, all of Dublin, Examiner and Herald, of Cork, The Kerryman, Sligo Champion, Roscommon Herald and Longford Gazette, and Danno's hometown newspaper, the Southern Star.

Guilford Loses

Joe Dolben and Bill Adams of Winchester won the four-ball invitation tourney at Lake Sunapee Country Club over the week-end. They took the final, 4 and 3, from Jesse Guilford and George Danton of Woodland

47 Yachts Set For Bermuda Race

Newport, June 22—With a record entry list of 47 yachts, the biennial Bermuda race of the Cruising Club of America was due to get underway from this port at high noon.

Starting from Brenton's Reef lightship, the racers will head out of a straightaway course to Bermuda, 635 miles away, while scores of yachts and smaller craft with Coast Guard destroyers and patrol boats give them a rousing sendoff

Included among the starters will be six German yachts and one each from Norway, Holland and the free city of Danzig. The yacht Edlu, winner two years ago is co-favorite with the ketch Vamarie, runner-up in 1934

Bitter Foes Clash At Garden Tuesday

Finish Training Today For Basket Fund Show

By Ringside

Sam Smith, physical director of the Boston Y. M. H. A., will referee tomorrow night's world's heavyweight wrestling championship between Danno O'Mahony, the titleholder, and Yvon Robert, French-Canadian challenger, at Boston Garden.

Smith was selected at a heated session between T. J. Gleeson, of New York City, president of the American Wrestling Association which ordered this bout, and Jack McGrath, manager of O'Mahony, and Eddie Quinn, pilot of Robert. Neither of the wrestlers sat in at the meetings.

"Boston is the best wrestling city in this country," Mr. Gleeson declares. "It is known that at least a half dozen of the best officials in the game reside here so I see no reason why we should force the promoters of the battle to pay railroad fare and other necessary expenses to bring an out-of-town man here."

Quinn Stubborn

Quinn, who has been stubborn in insisting that the job go to an outsider, consented to Smith only after the American Wrestling Association president had threatened to call off the whole show. It was the A. W. A. which forced Danno into the battle.

Both Danno and Yvon will break training late this afternoon, but the champion will spend the night before the battle at his camp at the Relax House

Robert, after his workout today, will drive to Lake Boone, where he will spend the night. Both will be in Boston tomorrow at 10 a. m. for a public and official weighing-in. Where the ceremony will be held will be decided this afternoon, in time to announce in late editions of all newspapers

Mr. Gleeson, president of the American Wrestling Association, came here mainly to present his organization's new belt to the winner of this match. This belt is emblematic of the world's heavyweight championship

After the weighing-in, Danno will retire to his home in Cambridge. Robert will go direct to a Boston hotel, where he will get a few before-the-battle winks of sleep. Freddie Moran, Danno's trainer, will stick with him and Louis Manning, trainer, will cling to Robert

Both men were pronounced in perfect condition after yesterday's work-out by their trainers.

"Danno never was in better condition—he'll give that Robert kid a terrific going-over," Moran declared.

"I am stringing along with Robert, that he'll beat the Irishman in less than 30 minutes," Louis Manning, Robert's trainer declared. "He is in tip-top shape and can tussle all night, if necessary."

4000 See Danno

Both Danno and Yvon worked yesterday before huge gatherings

More than 2000 fans watched the champion go through his drill at the Relax House, in Nahant. Like on other days, he fairly manhandled his training mates, Charley Webb, Joe Kujot and John Maimberg. Danno will take a little workout this afternoon, wrestling with one of his mates and doing regular calisthenics

Robert worked before 2000 fans at the White Spot and, for the first time since he has been working, there was a casualty in his camp. John Spellman, former Brown University athlete, tried to rough it up with the challenger. Robert suddenly straightened and let loose a terrific right-handed punch. It landed smack on Spellman's chin and he was knocked cold. He was taken to the dressing room and restored to consciousness by handlers

The punch Robert used to upset Spellman was a replica of the punch he used in Holyoke, in that impromptu battle, when he knocked out the Irishman. All of which is proof that the champion will have to be able to defend himself against that style of warfare if he is to retain his laurels.

Blackman Victor In Canoe Race

Ted Blackman of Needham won the 26-mile canoe marathon sponsored by the Samoset Canoe Club over the Charles river from Medfield to West Roxbury.

Al Howes of the Crescent Club finished in second place, six minutes behind the victor. Leo Hickey of the same club finished third, six minutes in back of Howes. The victor negotiated the distance in four hours, 43 minutes and 23 secon

"Danno Will Win"—Danno

By DANNO O'MAHONY

(World's heavyweight champion)

I will defend the world's heavyweight wrestling championship before my homefolks at Dublin Ireland late next month. Which means I will beat Robert tomorrow night at Boston Garden.

A workout this afternoon will conclude my conditioning. Right now I will tell you I am in the best shape of my career

The next time I defend the title in America I will establish my camp at the Relax House, Dan O'Mahony Everybody has been wonderful to me there and the days I have spent in camp have given me a complete rest.

I do not believe any wrestler, or fighter, ever had better training mates than have been in my camp. Charley Webb, Joe Kujot and John Maimberg have really put me through the paces, and all three lasted the whole route. Freddie Moran, my trainer, has been a severe taskmaker, but it all has been to my advantage.

I will beat Robert in straight falls, and the bout will not go longer than two hours, even though is is not a time-limit affair

How I will beat my opponent I will explain in the Boston American tomorrow.

"Robert Will Win"—Yvon

By YVON ROBERT

(French-Canadian Challenger)

Danno O'Mahony is a fair sort of wrestler but the championship he now holds will be owned by me after tomorrow night

I will beat Danno in quick time and he knows it. He took this match simply for the money he will receive and in keep from being suspended

I gave Danno a terrible shellacking at Holyoke that time I deserved the victory in our first official meeting. The Yvon Robert drew and I pinned his shoulders flat to the canvas

I hope this doesn't sound as if I am bragging, but I expect to make Danno quit under the pressure of punishment like he has never received before. The end will come inside of 20 minutes

They say Danno is quite a puncher. I knocked out John Spellman yesterday. If I can land the same kind of a punch tomorrow night, which I know I can do, your Mr. O'Mahony will take a long sleep before his Irish friends.

Notables

Plan to Attend Title Bout

The ringside at tomorrow night's world's heavyweight wrestling championship match will be crowded with sports notables from all over the country.

Hap Fahlane of Philadelphia and Joe (Tootsi) Mondt of Los Angeles, promoters, already have secured ringside seats. Ed White of Chicago, Tom Packs of St. Louis and other promoters have applied for seats. Besides, there will be wrestlers here from all over the world.

Right now the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund committee is considering increasing the size of the press section so as to be able to take care of the small army of newspaper men who have applied for seats.

CUBS HERE FOR FOUR GAMES WITH BEES

Mr. Boston Squire Has Big Chance

By Jack Conway

JACK SHARKEY can bounce up front in the heavyweight boxing division alongside of Jimmy Braddock and Max Schmeling if he wins from Phil Brubaker in their 10-round bout at a Goodwin A. C. show at Fenway Park on Thursday night.

Mr. Boston

Sharkey won the decision over Schmeling at the end of the 15-rounds in their last bout which was held in 1932. With his victory Sharkey gained the heavyweight championship of the world.

Two years previous Schmeling had won the title from Sharkey on a foul in four rounds. Max recently told me quite frankly that Sharkey gave him a terrific beating in their first bout.

"Sharkey handled me as if I were a novice in our first bout," said the German. "He hit me with everything."

The fact he had been able to survive such a bitter attack from Sharkey made Schmeling feel he could take Joe Louis' best punches and come on to win.

I thought Sharkey was the perfect fighting machine in his first bout with Schmeling. He did everything right, and if it had not been for some very poor officiating would have won the decision.

"Sharkey licked Schmeling in their first bout and should have been given the decision," Commissioner Bill Brown of the New York Athletic Commission told me in New York the other day. "I frankly admit the officials of our commission were at fault in that contest."

BRUBAKER BOUT

THE BRUBAKER bout presents Sharkey with a new opportunity. Brubaker comes here hailed as the most promising heavyweight in the country. He is a first class boxer and a heavy puncher. He had King Levinsky bobbing off the floor in their bout in San Francisco.

Brubaker has been training in New York, and is fit to give Sharkey a stirring tussle. He will finish his workouts in this city and will be at his best when he faces the former champion.

Opportunity will be banging at Brubaker's door when he faces Sharkey. If he wins, he will be in line as the leading challenger for the title next year.

Sharkey doesn't intend to let Brubaker win if possible. Jack started his come-back campaign after seeing Joe Louis stop Baer. He declared after that contest that he could beat Louis. Like Max Schmeling, Sharkey saw that Louis was a sucker for an overhand right hand punch.

If Sharkey had opposed Louis in New York the other night, he probably would have won even more quickly than Schmeling. He would have put on the steam and ended the show once he had Louis in distress. Schmeling took his time on account of the fact his left eye was partly closed and also to make certain he didn't make a mistake. Max has always been a methodical type of boxer who picks his spots and never hurries.

* * *

AFTER MAX

SHARKEY told me today he would rather clash with Schmeling than any heavyweight in the world.

"I have Max's number and can defeat him any time we meet," said Sharkey. "The sooner the better. I regret I didn't get Louis first, as I knew I could beat him. I always did have the Indian sign on colored heavyweights, as I proved when I stopped Harry Wills and licked George Godfrey."

Sharkey weighs 198 pounds and is in excellent physical condition. He has engaged in three bouts since he started his comeback campaign and his judgment of distance is certain. I look for him to be at his best when he starts shooting punches at the colorful Brubaker.

Schmeling's victory over Louis has also instilled new fire into Sharkey. He beat Max the last time they met, and knows what he can do with him. He doesn't intend to permit Brubaker or anybody else to stop his drive for the championship.

* * *

SCHMELING, of course, will get the title shot with Jimmy Braddock in September. He won this match by knocking out Louis. If he regains his championship, he will be the first former champion to do so.

Additional ring precedent would be shattered if Sharkey, another former champion, then came along and upset Der Max.

Schmeling's victory over Louis has instilled new life into boxing. Especially in the heavyweight group.

If Sharkey can lick Brubaker, the picture will be complete.

EGAN Offers ADVICE

CLUB HAS WON 15 OUT OF 16

By DAVE EGAN

Mr. Chollie Grimm, Mgr.,
Chicago Cubs,
National League Field.
Dear Chollie:

Well, old mud-clam, your team is going along very nicely and you have just succeeded in winning 15 out of your last 16, and I suppose you think you are sitting pretty today, coming here to play four games with our Bees.

You certainly have a fine team—great pitchers in French, Warneke, Root, Henshaw, Lee, and the others; outstanding catchers in Hartnett and O'Dea; well-balanced hitting and fielding strength—and you cannot be blamed for figuring that the Bees will be a soft touch for you.

Chollie, if you have any regard for the standing of your team in the pennant race, do not leave the issue up to the ninth inning. I mean to say, do not go into the last of the ninth a run ahead, or with the score tied, because if you do, sure pop you will blow the ball game and wind up with a head-ache.

Headaches

Frankie Frisch and Charlie Dressen have preceded you here as managers in the present home stand of the Bees, and they both departed with nervous indigestion and severe head-aches. The Bees won three out of four from the Cardinals, and two out of three from the Reds.

The Bees do not figure to win five out of seven games from the Cards and the Reds, Chollie, but that is what they have just succeeded in doing. I have been trying to ferret out the reason, and this morning, I directly accused Manager Willie McKechnie of Wukkiburg of thinking them into such startling victories.

"Mom," he said, "yo're er-r-razy. Rer-r-rger, Jur-r-dan, and Moor-r-r-re are r-r-r-r-responsibul. Dinna bother-r-r me and weel ya let me alone, loddie?"

Union Men

As I told you before, Chollie, be sure to win it long before the ninth, for the Bees are stinging very hard at the fag end of the game. They are a lot of lazy boys who do not wish to play more than the union scale of nine innings.

On Saturday, Lee angled in the ninth with the bases loaded to the gills and won the game, and yesterday Wally Berger got so furious at the thought of playing an extra inning or two that he ker-blammed the ball right out of the ball yard. Usually he drops the ball in the left field stands so that the customers can fight for a souvenir, but he was so mad yesterday that he hit it right over the heads of the clients.

What a bust! It got the boys in the press box telling each other stories on the way home.

Your boys will be looking at either Jim Chaplin or Ray Benge this afternoon, Chollie. All I wanted to warn you about was that ninth inning, so I'll close now with best regards.

Good luck, Chollie, and I hope all your pitchers break their arms and all your hitters get stone quarries in their eyes.

Most sincerely,
DAVE EGAN.

Brubaker In First Workout

Greater Boston gets its first glimpse of "Preacher Phil" Brubaker today when the California fighter works out at Beston's gym in Quincy at 2 p m.

Brubaker meets Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight boxing champion, in a 10-round bout at Fenway Park, Thursday night.

Matchmaker Rip Valenti yesterday completed his supporting card of bouts consisting of a half dozen six-round bouts featuring the pro debut of three former amateur champions.

Ralph Zannelli, the Providence welterweight, meets Gabby Poulin of Lynn, Freddy Camuso, Fall River's great amateur, will meet Tony Bent of Cambridge, Dante Yannetti of Chelsea, will meet Babe Woods of Salem, "Tiger" Terry Warrington of Nova Scotia meets Buck Tracy of Everett, Dick Maloney of the fighting clan of Maloneys, faces Ray (Twin) Lopes of Watertown, and Dick Hogan of Charlestown, will oppose Jack Erickson of Athol.

Schoolboys Meet In Two Clashes

The all-Greater Boston and a Suburban team at Somerville this evening, while the all-Middlesex and all-Interstate league teams are meeting at Victory Field, Watertown.

The games are part of the annual all-scholastic series. They will be followed by semifinal and final games later.

Record Finish Wins for Guldahl

Davenport, Ia., June 22 (U.P.)—Ralph Guldahl, lashed one of the most thrilling stretch drives in the history of golf to win the Western Open here Sunday, the margin of victory being seven under par, for a total of 281.

The 24-year-old professional, of St. Norwood Hills Country Club, St. Louis, birdied seven holes of the last 36 to pass the pace setting Tom Managrum of Denver.

Guldahl's competitive 64 tied the course record established by Craig Wood in an exhibition match in 1935.

A bad first nine on the final 36 hole Managrum, the leader, despite Guldahl's record-breaking performance. He clinched the runner-up position with a 277 total.

Byron Nelson of New York finished the last 18 in 65, six under par, for a total of 278 and third position.

Unknown Defeats Frankie Parker

Chicago, June 22—Robert Riggs, Jr., was added to America's list of potential tennis threats by virtue of a double victory in the national clay courts championship here.

Young Riggs, a 1936 graduate of a California high school, won the singles title over Frank Parker, 6-4, 6-4. Later he teamed with Wayne Sabin of Hollywood to win the doubles title.

Smith Wins

Manchester, N. H., June 22—Harold Smith of Worcester, representing the Norfolk Club, won the 10-mile marathon sponsored by the Alpine Snowshoe Club here.

MARCUM Opposes TIGERS

FERRELL ASKS FOR MORE WORK

By JOE CASHMAN

Detroit, June 22—Wesley Cheek Ferrell, only American League pitcher owning as many as 10 victories today, wants to hurl every third game for the Red Sox from now on.

The circuit's leader in wins last season, with 25, the cocky Carolinian predicts he'll turn in 30 triumphs this year if he's allowed to work regularly with two days' rest.

It looks very much as though Manager Joe Cronin is going to grant the wish of his righthanded ace of the Fenway flock is to escape having his pennant hopes blasted irreparably on this second jaunt through the hinterlands.

For, as our heroes open a three-game series with the world's champions Tigers today, they can point to only two victories in six starts against the White Sox and Browns, the weaker sisters of the Western group.

And Mr. Ferrell has accounted for both decisions.

Wesley's boastful assertion isn't an aftermath of his two-hit shutout over the Browns which gave his mates an even break in the Sunday twin-bill and saved them losing three straight to the cellar enders.

4 Games Back

He spoke his little piece on the eve of his Sabbath classic and while doing so, promised the whitewash he handed the Browns.

That effort pulled the Sox to within four games of the league leaders, Jack Wilson, "Fritz" Ostermueller, Jack Russell, Dartmouth's Ted Olson making an impressive big league bow, and "Rube" Walberg paraded to the hill to be found for 13 blows.

Johnny Marcum, who turned in a whale of a game as he suffered a 1 to 0 defeat in Chicago last Tuesday and returns against the Tigers today is shy and anxious to work as frequently as Ferrell, despite encouraging reports of the fact that Detroit Grover after two straight hammerings and long auto jaunts, is stirred down to such an extent that he's begging for and will probably get a chance to pitch here tomorrow with a two-day rest.

So it wouldn't be at all surprising to see these three reliable starters out of every six games for the remainder of the trip and with a fair share of the breaks they figure to do plenty of winning.

Whitesides Shine As Golf Team | Retail Tourney Starts Friday

By BILL GRIMES

Any time the boys get to arguing in the locker room over the best father and son team don't take a gamble with the rent money until you have given serious consideration to the Whitesides of the Country Club of New Bedford, or you're very liable to soil the landlord's cuff.

Although the strong puffy wind, which at times was of almost gale velocity, did not favor low scoring, Malcolm set up a new competitive record of 69 for the Country Club of New Bedford course.

The Country Club of New Bedford is a stiff test for any golfer, amateur or professional. True, it was in splendid condition, which, of course, helped, but the treacherous [illegible] made the going very [illegible]

Of the 69 shots played by young Whiteside just two of them were off line, which is just about as perfect as possible. He sliced a No. 1 wood shot at the 14th and landed in the deep rough, from where he [illegible] sensational recovery over [illegible] his ball stopping just one [illegible] in the cup. Then, at the [illegible] second shot, instead of [illegible] in toward the green landed [illegible] cup. And, he made but two [illegible] underclubbing at the 5th [illegible]

Malcolm Whiteside has been consistently in the low 70s at New Bedford for a couple of seasons, while Dave is having a tough day when he posts a score in the middle [illegible]

Therefore, it's quite apparent that the Whitesides are fully entitled to be ranked at "tops" among the father and son combinations.

GRANT Wins Up Hill BATTLE

THREE OTHER AMERICANS WIN

Wimbledon, Eng., June 22 (AP) — Bryan M. Grant, tiny mite from Atlanta, made his Wimbledon debut today and eliminated Heiner Henkel, German Davis Cup singles ace, 5—7, 3—6, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2, in the first round of the all-England tennis championships.

Grant, one of the world's greatest court-coverers, sprang a surprise in beating Henkel who had been heavily favored by most tennis experts.

His victory sent the Atlantan into the second round along with Donald Budge of Oakland, Cal., chief American contender; Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., the American champion, and John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, all of whom won in straight sets.

Three other Americans Gerald Stratford, W. W. Robertson and Hal Surface, were eliminated.

Stratford bowed to the defending champion, Fred Perry of England, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1; Robertson to L. de Borman of Belgium, 6—8, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4, and Surface to Nigel Sharpe of England, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

Wins in 2 Hours

Grant pulled victory out of the fire in one of the greatest uphill battles ever seen at Wimbledon.

After dropping the first two sets the atom from Atlanta drew cheers after cheer from the crowd as he raced back to topple the German in a two-hour match.

Both players were out the baseline with a machine-like barrage of beautifully timed ground-strokes that made Henkel shake his head in despair.

Henkel led 2-0 in the fifth set but the Georgian came back to take six in a row for set and match.

Throughout the duel Grant alternated and fell repeatedly to the turf. In the last game with victory in his grasp, the tiny American fell and badly twisted his wrist. He winced with pain but recovered quickly and uncorked a series of shattering shots that clinched the match.

Ann Marsters' Best Bets

Hollywood, Cal., June 22 — Starting a new week, I have high hopes today that my transcontinental handicapping will produce the winners needed to send the bankroll on a new upward surge.

Saturday was disappointing with a $3.60 drop in the total. AIR-FLAME won, paying $5.60 win and place and FORGET NOT came in second, paying $2.80. The third horse, TRUJILLO, ran out of the money so, entering the seventieth day the bankroll stands at $444.10.

Today I'm betting on EL PUMA in the seventh at Suffolk Downs and LOOKOUT BOYS in the second at Agawam. The bet is $2 win and $2 place on each one.

Victory Immoral?

Irate Alumnus Howls

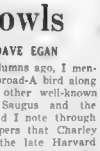
By DAVE EGAN

A few columns ago, I mentioned the broad-A bird along with these other well-known birds, the Saugus and the Bronnix, and I note through the newspapers that Charley Whiteside, the late Harvard rowing coach, now knows the peculiarly vicious sting of the broad-A bird.

Now as a Harvard graduate, I am busily engaged in circulating a petition which should meet with the approval of all the 10,000 men of Harvard. I am circulating a petition to have Joe Stubbs kicked out of his job, in order that Harvard mediocrity in sports may be fully and definitely established.

We Harvard men have become used to enjoying moral victories in all branches of sports for many years, while inflicting moral defeats on the Yales, but Eddie Farrell and Charlie Whiteside and Joe Stubbs apparently did not count on me, and they have been going along on the old theory that a coach is expected to turn out a team which will conduct itself decisively and even immoral victories.



Dave Egan

So, year in and year out Eddie Farrell turned out the best rowing team in the East, and beat Yale and Princeton and Dartmouth and everybody else who came along until he found himself plumb out of employment.

Then, last week, Charley White rides crew save the Yale-Harvard licking in history and he is so found himself plumb out of employment.

Violate Code

We Harvard men do not have to stand for any of that sort of nonsense from our paid employes, and we set the broad-A bird on the Messrs. Farrell and Whiteside.

Fred Mitchell and Dick Harlow are sitting snug and comfortable over there, building up character while their teams are being skinned. For a while there, it looked as if Mitchell was going to win himself out of his employment, for his baseball team seemed headed for the Intercollegiate title, just before the series with Yale, however, Mitchell remembered that he is expected to instil character into his boys, and he instilled it into them so successfully that they lost two consecutive games of baseball to the Yales, belted themselves out of the Intercollegiate championship, and saved Mitchell's job for him by the breadth of a fine, blonde hair—and he is the one in the front line there, way over on the left.

Harlow never once forgot himself last autumn, and his football players had so much character instilled into them that they were walking how-legged and doing the lighting dance when the season came to an end. They morally defeated several rivals, too, though sometimes the score was so lop-sided that it was hard to call it a moral victory, and the boss had to be content with a moral defeat.

Sore Spot

So now, Mr. Joe Stubbs is the only sore thumb and festering spot in the athletic scheme of things.

He did absolutely nothing for the character of the Harvard bove in the past several seasons, and last year, he proved himself a rotter by turning out the finest hockey team that Harvard ever produced.

The band-writing is on the wall for you, Stubbsy, my lad, and before they may call it something different when the broad-A bird gets at you, but it will still be the dirty rush in any language you care to mention, even including the King's charming and suave English.

They fixed Mr. Eddie Farrell and Mr. Charley Whiteside for beating the Yales out of races, meets and boat races, and they will fix you for beating them in hockey games.

Meanwhile, the Harvard Athletic Association can please me mightily by going and taking for themselves a running broad-A jump into the Charles.

DOUBLE Feature at ARENA

BARGAIN BOUTS ON WEDNESDAY

A double-header wrestling show will be presented by Sam Price at the Boston Arena Wednesday night with Cowboy Hughes meeting Chuck Montana and Marcel LaFayette tackling Paddy Mack in the co-features.

The Hughes-Montana bout will be two falls out of three with a 90-minute limit while the Mack-LaFayette clash will have no time limit with one fall enough to win.

Heading a couple of Henri Deplas from Paris France and Marcel Lavoie of the Arena staff, Montana and Montreal-ais Pete and Frank Dusek have matched them with a pair of pretty pachyderms in Hughes and Mack.

Montana was lost two hours at the Arena in each disqualification but Hughes wants the referee fired for not disqualify Montana against him no matter how much Chuck may punch and kick Hughes with a cleanup win over the bad man.

Other bouts on Wednesday night will find Dr. John Theopkick Murphy, Medford ace, Jim Spencer; Les Ryan from Fordham University vs. Widman Lloyd Bennett, back after two years in exile from the Arena; Jack Cronin vs. Art Gronon, Ed McNeil Hennigan from Halifax vs. Andy Finnan and Pierre Lavallee back from a long tour of wrestling in Europe vs. Mad Mike Tellegen.

Al Rodriguez, lightheavyweight boxer, and Jack Conley, noted wrestling referee from Providence will officiate.

Life of Max Schmeling

Hot Temper, Fast Fist Cost Him First Job

Continue the life story of Max Schmeling with Dana Eman Indau. Continue it daily in the Boston Evening American

CHAPTER 3

Max Schmeling's first boss was an arrogant man, and what happened to him should be a striking lesson to all bosses. I am not putting the threat on anybody, but I am hoping against hope that Warden Malloy and Jack Conway are reading this.

The arrogant man made Max retrieve a hammer which had fallen into the slime and ooze of a cess-pool, and when Max returned he threw the hammer away. "I was trembling with anger. I was afraid I might use the hammer."

The arrogant man sneered. He was the boss man, and this 14 year-old squirt would learn what discipline was. For the first time in his life—at Benrath-on-the-Rhine—Max threw a mud-covered right hand, and he did not miss. As a lissenin', Messrs Malloy and Conway.

When the foreman was revived his first act was to accept the resignation of Max as [illegible] politely.

Unknown Hero

Now enters another character in the story of Max Schmeling and it seems a crying shame that he, too, must go down to posterity unrewarded by even the mention of his name. He was a man from Cologne, and he saw the first Schmeling punch land on hostile jowls and he said

"You go down to Cologne. The Americans in khaki are putting on boxing shows and the winner gets one dollar."

"How much is one dollar?"

"It is three million marks."

At that moment in his life, Max first became interested in American dollars and in the business of fighting with his fists. To this day he has not lost his interest in either.

He went to Cologne and watched men box each other their hands encased in wine-red gloves. Other young Germans, too, were watching the sport, and were strangely stirred by it, and awkwardly imitated the "American style," and suddenly boxing was born in hopeful, [illegible] Germany.

The Two Macs

Alex MacLean and Eddie Mack who have fomented fights in Boston for many years, were promoters of three A. E. F. fights along the Rhine, and it may have been one of them who gave him the old brainwave and he used to a low him to box when they learned his age.

He returned to his home of Klein Lucknow and he put it square up to Franz Schmeling.

"Hutter," he said, "do you want me to go to sea like vater, or do you want me to be a prize fighter?"

She thought of the long sea voyage and the [illegible] and her husband was dodging mines in the North Sea.

"Max, a prize fighter?" she asked doubtfully.

He told her as graphically as he could, "Big win prizes and monies. Three million marks for a little fight. See how big and strong I am."

There was always danger for her boy and so Frau could not be argumentative. She replied [illegible]

"GO AND BE A PRIZE FIGHTER," she told Max "AND MAY DER GUTTE GOTT BE FOOLISH ENOUGH TO GO WITH YOU."

Louis Back Home, Downcast, Sullen

Detroit, June 22 (AP). Joe Louis came home today, downcast and almost sullen, in sharp contrast to his customary nonchalance.

There was no crowd at the station to meet him—another contrast to his previous triumphant returns.

"The fallen bomber, wearing blue spectacles to hide a damaged eye, pulled up his topcoat to conceal a swollen cheek and puffed lips, and ducked across the train shed to a taxicab stunning photographers.

His retinue separated in New York yesterday. Those who came to Detroit with Joe said he was "nothing to say."

Joe will recuperate from his beating at the summer home of Julian Black one of his managers, near Stevensville, Mich. He will do light training to keep in condition.

Black said he believed the eye and thresh ing at the hands of Max Schmeling would do Joe "a world of good." He and John Roxborough another member of the Bomber's board of strategy, had disclosed that Joe developed a bad case of over confidence before the fight.

Eckley played football at Cornell four years and baseball three. He joined the coaching staff in 1919 assisting in basketball and baseball until 1926, when he became head coach of the latter.

New Swim Mark By Mrs. Jarrett

New York, June 22—Since no one else appeared able to do it, Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett stroked out here to smash her own American long and short course records for the 220-yard backstroke today.

Mrs. Jarrett was timed in two minutes, 49.6 seconds, competing in the metropolitan senior championship events.

Cleveland Offers $1,250,000 for Fight

Cleveland, June 22 (AP). Lincoln G. Dickey, general manager of the Great Lakes Exposition, wired Max Jacobs, boxing promoter, today he was prepared to underwrite a world's heavyweight championship match at the Cleveland Stadium in September between Champion James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling of Germany for $1,250,000.

The telegram addressed to Jacobs at the Twin-Coach Country Sporting Club, New York, read:

"I am authorized to enter into negotiations with you to stage the James J. Braddock-Max Schmeling match for the heavyweight championship of the world here in September at the Cleveland Municipal Stadium.

"We are prepared to underwrite the match for $1,250,000. If you are interested in bringing the Braddock-Schmeling fight here, I am prepared to meet you either in New York or Cleveland to discuss the matter."

Auto Victor

Langhorne, Pa., June 22—Floyd Davis of Springfield, O., won a 10-mile auto racing classic here in one hour, nine minutes and 50 seconds. He headed a field of 14 starters.

The Missing Watchman

Wollaston Man's Story of a Hunch That Paid Off

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Adventure's a funny thing, boys and girls. It's bound to be, for that matter, because it's composed almost entirely of the strange twists of Fate and the odd kinks and quirks of Fortune. And it's my opinion that the oddest of these twists happened in the case of HARRISON BOWLEY and the missing watchman.

You know how these adventures sometimes come two and three in a row—how one bit of tough luck will lead to another, and yet another? Well, here's that same thing working backwards. Here's an adventure that led AWAY from another adventure.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Harry Bowley lives at 190 Fayette street, Wollaston. He works in the armored car department of the United States Trucking Corporation of Boston, riding the big steel-plated trucks with a .45 automatic strapped to his side, with an eye peeled for bandits and the like. Harry is a crack shot with that automatic and he knows how to use his eyes. You'll realize that well enough before we've finished with his story.

On a job like that you'd sort of expect to have adventures. Well, Harry did, too. Says he: "Ever since the first day when I put on a uniform and rode out on an armored truck I had been waiting for something to happen. It took me six months or more to get over the idea that every car that fell in behind us was following us—to tumble to the fact that the men packed in the car ahead of us were just fellows on their lunch hour, and that the man with the pushcart was a real peddler and carried no machine gun under his pile of onions or bananas."

Yep, for six months Harry felt that way about it. And then, just as he was beginning to get over such ideas—just as he was beginning to think his job was turning out a lot of dull routine—something happened to make him realize that—well, maybe some of those pushcart peddlers did have a machine gun stowed away beneath the onions and cabbages and potatoes and what not.

It was one chilly morning in March, 1935. Harry got into the company office about 7:30 o'clock. He looked at the bulletin board and saw that he was assigned to Route 3 with Joe Dever for conductor and Herman Kenny driving. The big job of the day was to deliver a $72,000 payroll to the Ford plant in Somerville. They left the office at 8 o'clock as usual, drove straight to the bank and got the money in two suitcases.

They got the suitcases in the truck without any trouble and headed for Somerville. "It was just the beginning of a dull day to me," says Harry. "I sat in the back of the truck and gazed out the back window, watching the flow of traffic and the streams of office workers hurrying to their jobs." They reached the Ford plant and turned into the wide driveway, and Herman Kenny stopped the truck at the front entrance.

Harry stuck his head up into the gun turret of the car and peered out through a narrow opening. That was just part of their regular routine. He was looking for Mandy Mandeville, the plant watchman, who usually had the corridors cleared of idlers before their arrival and appeared at the front door to invite them in with a wave of his hand.

But this time, Mandy Mandeville was not in sight. That might mean a mething—or it might mean nothing at all. Anyway Harry wasn't satisfied with the looks of things. He had a hunch that something was wrong.

Harry turned to Joe Dever. "It's darned funny there's no watchman in sight," he said. And Joe agreed with him. "Better drive around to the rear," he told Herman Kenny.

At the rear of the building was a driveway over which they could run the truck right into the plant. Herman drove around. They entered the building and stopped. While Harry stood guard Joe Dever picked up the two suitcases filled with money and carried them into the cashier's cage. So far, everything was routine. Then, suddenly, Harry turned his eyes from the cage and spotted Mandy Mandeville tied to a swing watchman.

He was standing about 30 feet down the corridor, talking to a group of four well-dressed men. So Mandeville was all right after all—just busy talking to somebody. Harry began to feel sheepish about making Herman drive all the way around the plant for nothing. He called out, "Hi, there, Mandy. Why weren't you at the front door to meet us this morning?"

And then a curious thing happened. Mandeville was looking straight at him, but he didn't answer. "He just looked white," says Harry. "No expression on his face at all. Then, abruptly, the whole group turned and walked toward the front door."

Again there seemed to be a quick quiver to Harry. He turned and ran into the cashier's office. If there was going to be any trouble, his duty lay where the dough was. He had scarcely got into the office, when Mandy Mandeville came bursting in.

"By George," he cried, "it was a lucky thing for you that you went around to the back of the plant. Those birds were gangsters. They had a gun in my back. I'd just told them to get out of the building when they stuck me up and held me there, waiting for you to come in with the money."

Those words had just left Mandy's lips when the money bag in the office was taken. Even then they might have made an attempt but according to Mandeville's story, Harry's business-like standing there with his hand on his gun, had them changed their minds about the watchman and to the car they drove away.

"That," says Harry, "is the closest call our Boston office ever had—and it's about as near to excitement as I ever want to get."

You've got a story to tell that's as good as this one of Harry Bowley's. I know doggone well you have. Well—spout it in to me Tomorrow I'll have another great yarn. Watch for it!

HOW TO WIN $100.00

And Membership in The Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Thomas H. Campbell of 11 8 West Adams street, West Somerville, won a hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of this page.

It's the easiest money you ever earned. Here's the only rule: YOUR STORY MUST BE TRUE. Everyone is eligible and you don't have to be a writer to compete, because Floyd will collaborate with you and iron out any rough spots. Just write down the TRUE story of your biggest thrill and mail it to Floyd, care of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. Write your name and address plainly and keep a copy of your letter, as NO STORY CAN BE RETURNED. Do not send valuable pictures or souvenirs. Just send the FACTS!

'Jock' Whitney in New Screen Merger

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 22—Good morning! For a start we confirm the news, first printed here, that the youthful millionaire, John Hay ("Jock") Whitney, will join film forces with David O. Selznick. In other words, Jock's "Pioneer Pictures" has been absorbed by David's "Selznick International," with David as president, Merian C. Cooper as vice president, Henry Ginsberg as general manager, and Russell Birdwell in charge of advertising and publicity.

Thus a new major motion picture producing company enters the film field, for the stimulating idea of combining the talents of stars, writers, directors and executives employed by the industry has proved to be a success. Director John (Jack) Conway will head the new George Cukor will head directorial battery. It is said Colman and Edward G. Arnold will star in the immediate future through United Artists. Technicolored pictures will fill 50 per cent of the schedule.

Bette Davis absence from the "God's Country and the Woman" set at Warner Brothers gives credence to the rumor that Bette Davis is pouting. Money and other things it seems have reined their wily heads in conflict with her art. Her contract has only a half year to run. Some of Bette's friends say that her pouting is her way of getting what she wants. The best of luck, Bette. I've ever got to see you.

Alan Jones, you remember, found first fame with he sang "Alone" in the Marx Brothers picture "A Night at the Opera." Now Harry Sherman, producer of Bill Boyd's Hopalong Cassidy western dance numbers, has signed Alan to a long term contract. Alan will be featured in the Hopalong Cassidy series. Vets Tell Plans for Bonus

Millions of war veterans receive the bonus windfall, and Hearst Metrotone cameramen drag the heels of postmen to see how the recipients of nearly $2,000,000,000 plan to spend their dough.

From Hollywood to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington; from New York to millions of homes all over the land, the former soldiers' replies indicate a wide variety of uses for the long-awaited money. New York City's veterans collect about $100,000,000, and you can bet that the postman doesn't have to ring twice.

President Roosevelt travels to several states on a speaking tour, laying the groundwork for his forthcoming campaign for re-election, while Governor Alf M. Landon maps his campaign strategy with his advisors. At Dallas the Chief Executive is warmly greeted by more than 50,000 persons who jam the Cotton Bowl to hear his message, and at Topeka Kas. Landon and his family spend hours on the front porch accommodating reporters and photographers.

West Point graduates 276 of them receive an added thrill over the presence of Cadet John J. Pershing of the Class of 1886, which left the Point just 50 years ago.

Haile Selassie could Emperor of Ethiopia arrives in England and receives a welcome which surprises him. Leaving his ship at Southampton, the Negus is cheered by 20,000 Britons, and after his arrival at the private home where he will stay while in England, he receives the plaudits of other thousands.

Across the Channel Leon Blum, France's new premier, is shown announcing to some of the million strikers that he has taken means to get all these desperate for better working conditions. And the cameras show the paralysis which had settled down upon French industry as the result of the passive walkout.

"Why, no," she said, puzzled. And then. "Do they wear their hair like that at Harvard?"

Occasionally, I told her—but we didn't pursue the subject.

What Model Man Must Conform To

"And I don't like men," she went on, "who wear black shoes with a brown suit. I do wish men wouldn't do that."

She grew a little pensive and said:

"I don't think I would ever marry an actor. They're too impractical. And yet—I wouldn't want a man to be TOO practical. He must be poetic and sensitive as well."

She smiled at herself and said: "I suppose if I loved him, it wouldn't matter what he was."

Then she added: "But he couldn't wear bow ties, or cut his hair short, or wear black shoes with a brown suit, or adopt a superior attitude with women.

"He couldn't be humble, either, and he would have to be assertive without being overbearing. And he couldn't be too conventional. He would have to be practical yet poetic. And he couldn't wear checked coats. And he couldn't wear suspenders."

That seemed to sum up Olivia de Havilland's "Ideal man." And at this point she glanced quickly at Errol Flynn to make sure that he hadn't been listening. (Flynn has a mean habit of chuckling at little Olivia and teasing her about her opinions.)

She was relieved to find that Flynn was going unconcernedly at ice still waters of Sherwood Lake.

HANEY ON MARKET

New Highs Hit

BY SOME STOCKS SEEN

As Good Omen

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 22—Some of the stock market averages have reached "new highs" for the year and for the bull market; others have not. This mixed showing is mainly the result of much selectivity and shifting.

It is to be noted that the high average of April 6 was not the high for many stocks. Earlier in the year, some industrial investment stocks were liquidated by insiders, and soon several large operators sold their speculative favorites. Now some of these stocks have resumed leadership, and several have made new highs.

The utility stocks touched high on February 15. Last week this group approximated that high.

On the other hand, the rank and file of "industrial" stocks made their high average on April 6, and these have not yet recovered the ground lost on the April reaction. The small traders and "the public" have not yet taken hold. When they do, it seems likely that many of the more backward issues will participate. If so, the composite averages will rise considerably above the April peak.

Chartwise, I note that a composite average of 100 mixed stocks on last Wednesday touched the level of February 15, where the utilities topped out, and that this is the level which was the lower resistance during March 16-30. It was through this level that the market plunged on the bad break of April 20. Some hesitation was natural here. By the same token, further progress may be looked upon as a significant "penetration."

* * *

Wall Street has not been unanimously bullish, and a considerable trading element has been inclined to fight the May-June recovery. Of course, the public following has been very small. This condition, however, has made for a better technical position. A good many traders last week had begun to feel that they had missed the boat. As a result it would not be surprising to find the average "poking through" on the up side rather vigorously one of these days.

* * *

On the whole, it seems to me that fundamentals favor the rise. High taxes are inevitable. Labor troubles are threatening. Some after-the-bonus let-down in business may occur later on. But, on the other hand, we find the following factors:

(1) Money rates are very low, and unlikely to rise much. This increases the capitalized value of any fairly certain dividend income from a group of stocks. It makes it attractive to buy and hold any selected and diversified group of stocks which are priced not over 25 times earnings per share, and which yield or promise to yield better than 3 per cent.

(2) Credit inflation and a reduced purchasing power of currency are factors. Government spending means government borrowing, and that means no serious tightening of credit. It means increasing bank deposits, and large excess reserves. As to currency, the continued injections of over-valued silver, and the fact that the revaluation of the gold dollar has not found full expression in commodity prices, both indicate further depreciation in the paper dollar.

In the absence of greenback inflation, the foregoing situation should in due time bring an optimistic "credit inflation" and rising prices.

* * *

(3) Refunding operations, while now checked, have been heavy, and have had two results. One has been to decrease the fixed charges and increase the net income of many companies. The other has been to drive thousands of bondholders into the stock market—as a result of calling their high-yield bonds.

(4) Finally, I think it reasonably clear that political developments favor the stock market. The New Dealers are on the defensive, and will therefore be more cautious and less radical. The less intelligent radical element in the country (Coughlin, Townsend, etc.) is being driven to consider a "third party" movement. This will be futile, but it will reduce the strength of the New Deal. At the same time, the reorganized and more liberal Republican party has become more effective and bets on Roosevelt promise to fall to an even-money basis before long.

The Canadian court decisions against the Dominion's "New Deal," and the mess the French New Dealers are getting into, will have their psychological effect as object lessons.

The general effect is to reassure savers and investors. Property and contract rights seem safer. Monetary extremes are less probable. Utility and railway regulation is less likely to be drastic. Thus the capital goods industries, electrical equipment, steel, etc., have a better chance.

And neither party will stand for deflation.

STOCK Price Trend UPWARD

OPTIMISM RULES

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

New York, June 22 — The thing that makes most people believe stocks are going higher is the "stubbornness" of the market.

That is, reactions do not go far, nor does heavy selling come on price weakness.

The popular interpretation therefore is that there is no stock for sale, that business guarantees no disturbing influence.

True, the business curve continues favorable. Heavy industries, especially steel, have come in for expansion and consumer trade has been buoyed anew by the bonus distribution.

The optimists see no reason for worry, therefore. They are not concerned apparently with the fact that prices are at high ratios to per-share earnings, that dividends are low.

All the optimist sees is that the trend is upward and he allows for no early termination. If this is so, then it is foolish to argue with the bulls.

To believe this, it is necessary also to believe that expansion in business is lacking in artificiality. To believe this is to fool only ourselves.

Nobody in his right mind would even suggest that government spending in relief, bonus, waste or whatever it be called, has not contributed to the "better business."

Just imagine what business would be like if the government were to stop its extraordinary expenditures by billions of dollars.

Already in this fiscal year the federal spending has exceeded eight billions of dollars. This is the greatest peace-time spending spree in history. Of course, this makes for "good business"—while it lasts.

The market, however, must take into account the prospects.

The government spending is intricately wound up with politics.

The opposition candidate has already proclaimed in favor of drastic curtailment of federal spending.

The man in the White House will probably make the same pledge.

One can disbelieve them both, as an impossibility or for other reasons, if one wants to capitalize the spending in his calculations.

But during the campaign the issue of economy is likely to be advocated by both candidates.

They will vie with each other in promising economy.

If they make good only a portion of their pledges the effect on business would be instantaneous and substantial.

Now, if spending on a wild basis continues, there is the positive prospect that the government's credit will be destroyed.

That would bring first a panic, for the value of government bonds, of the dollar, of everything in the economic system would be thrown into doubt.

After that, there would be one of two things: 1—Inflation on a still grander scale with the inevitable crash, or, 2—Renewed deflation to wipe out the spending which today is proceeding helter-skelter.

New York, June 22 — While the politicians monopolize the headlines, the combined personal efforts of upwards of 40,000,000 self-supporting Americans continue to push the curve of total business upward.

This takes place, despite the thrusting forward of the administration's unpopular punitive tax measure.

It reaffirms the belief that only confusion of counsel, political business baiting and inordinate and prodigal governmental spending are delaying a thorough-going economic recovery.

Unquestionable retail business, especially in men's apparel and also other lines, such as automobiles, is getting temporary counter-seasonal stimulus from the distribution of cash in the form of the bonus. Moreover, belated distribution of farm benefit checks will have a similar boosting effect.

Yet, apart from these transient items, the recovery has a more solid foundation. Little power comes from the partial correction of some of the major maladjustments and disparities within the economic system itself.

For example, farm gross income thus far reported for the early months of the year. Total receipts, despite the reduction in benefits, have been larger.

This change contributes to an equilibrium under which the principal economic groups can give employment to one another through interchanging the products of their employees' labor.

Likewise, other trade destroying gaps between the price structure have been narrowed, and in addition the accumulation of deferred demand creates a substantial business building factor.

With the political "ins" and "outs" battling for power, they will thrust economic issues to the forefront. The two parties will undertake to compete in making it appear that economic recovery is contingent on their success at the polls.

There are indications that the party in power will seek to emphasize their alleged trade lifting policies rather than their "reform" record, as the issue in the campaign.

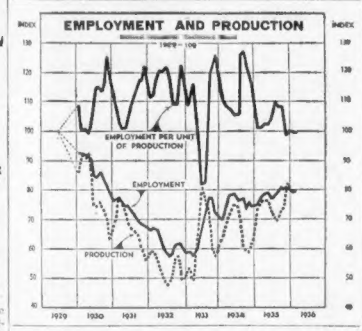
Occasionally, as in 1896, when the two major parties are of minor importance to the business cycle.

On account of the far reaching New Deal program for business regulation and for putting the government in business, the forthcoming election is of more than routine interest to the investing and enterprising classes and to the working people who are employed by them.

Even so, it is apparent that political spellbinders in both camps will overstress political factors and underestimate the importance of distinctly economic factors.

Basic business indicators reveal business in the large proceeding at about the rate of last year, and some 15 per cent ahead of the records for the first half of 1935.

PRODUCTION



EMPLOYMENT Relation Is Subject of Study

Here is a chart that shows the relationship between production employment and employment per unit of production. The heavy solid line at the top of the chart shows employment per unit of production.

This line is obtained by dividing the employment index by the production index.

Employmeat per unit of production simply means that when production is in excess of employment fewer employes are needed to produce one specific unit of a manufacturing industry. Similarly when employment exceeds production it takes a greater number of employes to produce the same specific unit.

Consider the summer of 1933. The production index was over while the employment index was about 66. Since production was considerably in excess of employment fewer employes were required to produce a production unit. The index of employment per unit of production therefore dropped to about 81.

It will be noted that except for short periods in 1930, 1933 and 1935, production is under employment. This is caused by using the base year 1929 100. Production in 1929 was high, more so than employment.

That means that the average production index for 1929 was greater than the employment index. Subsequent production figures expressed as a percentage of the 1929 average have a greater weight factor to contend with than employment.

COTTON INDUSTRY

Current Sales Exceed Output

New York, June 22—The marked improvement in the cotton manufacturing industry of this country which began about four weeks ago was continued and extended during the past week, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. Mill sales of both unfinished and finished goods continued to run above current production, further reducing unsold stocks of goods at mills and adding to unfilled orders.

"Orders placed with mills called for deliveries running into the last quarter of the year in many cases," says the Exchange Service. "Prices of goods rose more than the sharply advancing prices for the raw material, entailing an improvement in mill margins which had become very narrow during the period of slow buying of goods earlier in the year. Some mills increased their operations contra-seasonally. Forwardings of cotton to domestic mills have totaled 393,000 bales in the last four weeks, compared with 283,000 in the same weeks last year."

Index numbers of cotton manufacturing operations in this country, based on average operations in 1922-25 as 100, compiled by the Exchange Service, indicate that the domestic spinning industry is running above the pre-depression level. The index number for the week ending June 13 is 106.3, compared with 98.7 a month previous, 78.7 a year previous, and 73.9 two years previous.

The increase in cotton manufacturing operations is commonly attributed to the fact that cotton is selling substantially lower than the general commodity price level, on the basis of pre-depression relationships, the industry has been relieved of the processing tax which added about 25 per cent to the cost of the raw material, and the improvement of heavy, capital goods industries in this country which has resulted in a large demand for heavy cotton fabrics.

The higher rate of cotton mill operations is reflected in a large increase in forwardings of cotton to mills of this country during the current season to date. They total 5,662,660 bales, compared with 4,430,000 in the same period last season, and 5,121,000 two seasons ago.

Sugar Distribution

New York, June 22—Distribution of sugar in the United States for the first five months of 1936 totaled 2,532,263 long tons, raw value, compared with 2,563,394 tons for the comparable 1935 period, Lamborn & Co. reported. Cane Sugar distribution gained 4 per cent and beet sugar decreased 19.4 per cent during the period.

Comments Of Brokers

Considering that they are in the difficult area represented by the April highs with volume low and uncertainties such as the extent of the coming seasonal business recession and are facing possible developments adverse to business sentiment at this week's convention, a more conservative policy on the stock market is justified.—G. M., P. Murphy & Co.

Pending a general increase in volume of trading, no definite market trend is indicated, but, if activity soon expands on the upside, would be inclined to follow it for a worthwhile trading move. Otherwise, remain on sidelines.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

It is our belief that approximately the 160 area will prove too difficult a level to penetrate at this time and will bring about a corrective reaction that should last for several days.—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

The market appears to be placing a favorable interpretation upon developments in the political field.—J. F. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

It seems likely that materialization of such dips would again provide favorable technical setting for subsequent resumption of the recovery movement.—E. S. Bache & Co.

While business promise remains unchanged a policy of buying on setbacks continues warranted.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

Domestic Wools

Domestic wools were not quite as active in Boston as during the previous week, but prices were very firm. While there was quite a strong price resistance reported on the part of many buyers, a few lines of domestic wools continued to move at prices that showed a hardening tendency.

TRADE Outlook GOOD

SECURITIES REACH PEAK

By B. C. FORBES

Thanks to political developments interpreted in influential circles as encouraging, and to persistent trade and industrial improvement, stock prices have reached their highest level since 1931.

The average quotation for representative issues on the New York Stock Exchange is 10 points above the 1935 peak, 28 points above the 1934-1933 peaks, and more than 50 per cent beyond the best level in 1932.

Quotations are almost four times the average touched at the depression bottom in July, 1932, less than 10 points below the 1930 nadir. But they are still almost 60 per cent under the all-time summit reached in September, 1929.

The market's recovery after its recent substantial setback has convinced chart devotees and many others that still higher prices will be attained between now and November.

Beyond that few venture to guess what may happen, since much will depend, it is generally admitted, on the outcome of the election.

In financial circles, where New Dealism is distrusted, many ordinary expectation is that Republican victory would bring immediate and spectacular improvement in security market quotations and, later, a veritable boom in business.

Overwhelming public endorsement of President Roosevelt's policies would be the signal, according to financial reasoning, for a sharp relapse of longer or shorter duration.

Should President Roosevelt be returned to power, with a substantial increase in Republican members of Congress, the financial analysis is that the trend in both business and stocks would be at least mildly upwards because of the nation's invincible ability to resume progress and prosperity after long-continued depression, repression, obsolescence, under-buying.

That, briefly, is how the financial community reads America's prospects.

Wall Street attaches significance to the fact that offerings of securities have diminished during spells of weakness and that recoveries have stimulated renewed activity.

My contacts reveal that a less pessimistic view is being taken of the political outlook since the harmonious Republican convention.

Landon appears to have improved on better acquaintance.

Powerful easterners have gained faith that he will appeal strongly to the intelligent elements of our farming population, that he will receive a very large endorsement of men of affairs in most sections of the country and that he will have stimulated and greatly working-class citizens who are alarmed over the appalling piling up of debt which they must meet, sooner or later, through grievous taxation.

All this, please understand, is the interpretation made by the financial community and the majority of eastern business leaders. How the rest of the country will respond will not be ascertainable until the campaign progresses.

Meanwhile, with the exception of ugly labor outbreaks here and there and threatening of aggressive activities by the Lewis faction to force unionization in the far-flung steel industry, economic news and trends are, on the whole, reassuring.

Electric consumption is running ahead of its boom time peak.

Freight car loadings, impending higher price schedules, steel demands and production are the largest since 1930.

Most durable goods industries are now doing distinctly better than a year ago.

Building is on the up-grade.

Railway car loadings are better than in many months ago. So are bank clearings.

Employment is steadily, if slowly, increasing.

Wage trends, though not pronounced, are in the right direction.

Then, retail trade maintains its vigor. But, as warned a week ago week, the "boom" popularity expected immediately following the bonus distribution has not materialized.

Among all dividend changes are for the better.

Last week, too, our chief cereals advanced notably, as did cotton, thus making for greater purchasing power in agricultural regions.

Particularly gratifying has been the ability of governmental agencies to market substantial amounts of the cotton which has long been overhanging the market.

Nevertheless, it is not at all certain that a summer relapse of some severity may not be experienced.

Internal Peace Need of China

New York, June 22 (AP)—China's financial future depends on internal peace and "better political understanding" with Japan, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the British government, said today.

His declaration was made in Shanghai, where he has been conducting a detailed study of Chinese economic and financial problems. Sir Frederick's statement was issued here by the British Consulate.

"The prospects of the currency," he said, "and indeed of the whole financial situation of China, for the future, depend firstly on the maintenance of peace in the interior of China, and secondly on a settlement of the special situation north of China.

"In particular, customs revenues are a vital factor in Chinese finance and every effort should be made to put an end to their deflection in eastern Hopei province. These difficulties cannot be settled without a better political understanding between China and Japan."

Bar Silver Steady

London, June 22 (AP)—Bar silver barely steady, ½ lower at 20 9-16d. (Sterling price equivalent to 44.13 cents.)

Public Savings Mulct by Taxes

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, asserting the government "cannot of itself create a single thin dime," declared today that 75 per cent of public expenditures "fall within the larger definition of boondoggling."

Addressing the annual convention of the Kiwanis International, Thorpe struck at what he called "the national menace of increased taxation," and said "the savings of the people, from which all taxation must come, are diverted from wealth producing enterprises to the overhead expense of the nation."

"Some of this expense is necessary to protect and cement society," said the editor, "Most of it is for expensive frills which no private business or, indeed, family would or could indulge in."

Flax Experiments

Experiments are being conducted in Poland by the local textile industry for the purpose of ascertaining to what extent flax may be combined with cotton in the production of cotton fabrics and whether it may be yarned with existing textile machinery without spindle adjustment, according to a report to the Commerce Department from its Warsaw office.

N. E. RAILROADS

Fare Cut Aids Revenue Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Early reports of June passenger travel indicate that New England railroads are not suffering any loss in revenues because of the fare cut inaugurated on the first of the month.

Actual traffic is showing gains running from 20 to 25 per cent ahead of last year which enables the good revenue showing.

As yet the effect on net income is uncertain because of the difficulty in estimating cost figures for part of a month. However, the knowledge more equipment and service is required to handle the larger traffic will prevent too hasty optimism regarding net results.

Sales of farm equipment in 1936 are expected to exceed those of 1929 by more than 20 to 35 per cent. A special report just issued by the Brookmire Economic Service estimates the possible dollar sales at over $425,000,000, a gain of $100,000,000. Of the interesting points made by this report is the fact the farm equipment makers have a potential market which conservative estimates indicate would keep the industry busy for the next nine years at the 1935 rate. This is a really amazing situation that definitely suggests substantially larger profits in 1936 over 1935.

Notebook: Complaints of tire makers that recent price increase does not cover costs may foreshadow another price lift ... Cement manufacturers are operating in the black for the first time since 1931 ... And the outlook for the fall year includes forecasts of a sales gain running to 40 per cent ... Rayon is another industry coming out from around that corner ... Late returns have sales well ahead of last year ... Aviation is counting heavily on express revenues ... Not immediate perhaps but in the not too distant future.

The market is starting the week in one of those in-between positions that is the bane of most farm traders. All eyes are on Philadelphia this week and it is not at all unlikely that the convention and a nearby price movements on the stock exchanges will be found on page one. For there traders will find the answer to just how far the dominant political party will swerve left in its haste to outdo the third party and Democratic Intermediate trend, which is upward, will not be changed by such events, however, and we will continue our position as previously outlined.

This and That: Bonds did little last week ... All groups held in fairly good shape ... Industrials left something to be desired, while foreigns offered further evidence of a better under current in world affairs ... Which is very gratifying to us since we called attention to this possibility some days ago ... And the answer has been given in the lifting of sanctions by European nations and the retraction of United States warnings against the late European belligerents ... All told, a bit more action on the upside by industrials, rails and utilities would encourage traders in equities.

WHEAT BREAKS Moisture Relief

Chicago, June 22 (AP)—Unexpectedly sharp declines in turns of wheat quotations led to a big tumble of wheat values here early today. Some moisture relief for drought areas in the Dakotas was a bearish factor, together with a forecast of further unsettled conditions.

Opening ⅞-2½ cents lower, July 91¼-⅝, September 93¼-94¼, wheat then rallied somewhat. Corn shared 1¼-2¼ down, September 63⅝, and for the time being after little.

LABOR Index Up

Washington, June 22—Wholesale commodity price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics advanced 0.4 per cent during the week ended June 13, the rise being due largely to sharp increases in prices of farm products and foods.

The index now stands at 78.7 per cent of the 1926 average. It is 0.8 per cent higher than in the like week of last month and 1.4 per cent lower than in the like 1935 week.

BUYERS Reach for STOCKS

GAINS RUN FROM $1-$3

New York, June 22 (AP) — Buyers reached quietly for a wide assortment of industrials in today's stock market.

Chrysler, liveliest of the list, pushed up about 3 points near the fourth hour to a new year's peak.

Others, 1 to 3 higher, included General Motors, Hudson Motor, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Consolidated Edison, North American, General Aircraft, Boeing, Sperry, American Can, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, American Sugar Refining, Westinghouse and Union Carbide.

Equities received little aid from expenditure plans, but were broadly backed water under profit-taking. Bonds did better. Foreign gold interests gained in the influence the dollar ass European tension seemed to be lessening.

Good News

Adjournment of Congress apparently failed as a prime market stimulant. Wall Street had its eyes principally on favorable outside news.

Politics held much of the attention of the boardrooms, although it was said to be questionable whether current campaign rumblings were having much effect on stocks.

The activity of Chrysler, General Motors and stocks of other corporations having large surpluses was attributed to hopes that the new tax bill will force payment of larger dividends.

Reports of expanding orders, both from private and government, all sources, brought buying in Douglas Aircraft and some of other aviation issues.

While market sentiment had its dark spots, the widening demand for steel was a helpful influence. Intermediate trend, which is upward, will not be changed by such events, however, and we will continue our position as previously outlined.

Washington Notebook

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Heavy gains in travel were reported to the commerce department by representatives in eight cities. Gains were attributed to recent reductions in rail passenger fares as well as to the vacation trend and improvement in mass buying power.

Spring recession in textile activity was evident in the census bureau report of May, when the decline in cotton spinning machinery operated in May. Woolen activity also had dropped from the high level reached last year. Generally, however, textile manufacturing was regarded as fairly active.

Out of $370,668,000 loaned by the R.F.C. to receivers of insolvent banks to aid payments to depositors, there remain 170 loans with unpaid balance of $35,000,000 which could be absorbed by active banks, according to J. F. T. O'Connor, controller of the currency. He disclosed banks were considering taking over $7,500,000.

Fifty-nine banks covered by federal deposit insurance suspended between January 1, 1934, and May 31 of this year, official figures reveal. Their deposits approximated $14,500,000.

The federal power commission has authorized the Florida Power Corporation to issue $1,000,000 in mortgage bonds, mostly for debt repayment.

Production of fresh and frozen packaged fish as primary processing plants in the United States last year totaled 107,130,000 pounds, worth $11,148,000, an increase of 65 per cent in quantity and 38 per cent in value over 1934, the commerce department reports.

Responding to building improvement, shipments of floor and wall tile reported to the census bureau by 47 manufacturers increased in the first four months to 10,118,592 square feet from 6,286,087 in the corresponding 1935 months. The value rose to $3,130,319 from $1,841,607.

A New and All Powerful Voicing of the Will and Determination of a People

ALL reports of the Republican convention at Cleveland, whether from returning delegates, trained newspaper observers or casual spectators, agree that it was a remarkable convention, totally different from any that has been held within a generation.

We are accustomed to the organized claques, the prolonged cheering, the artificial enthusiasm of the usual convention.

These tricks of the politician are easily seen through. They leave the beholder cold.

The enthusiasm displayed at Cleveland, however, was not of this description.

It was startling. It was thrilling. Everyone sensed it.

It was manifest that the convention was a convention OF THE PEOPLE!

The political chieftains of bygone days were quick to realize this. THEIR SUN HAD SET AND THEY KNEW IT.

They took the back seats to which they were assigned, and promptly, and rather meekly, acquiesced in what they dared not oppose—A NEW AND ALL-POWERFUL VOICING OF THE WILL AND DETERMINATION OF A PEOPLE.

The question which dominated the convention almost to the exclusion of every other question—was a simple one: SHALL AMERICA TRIUMPH?

It was a convention of Americans, willing and eager to sacrifice all they have and all they are rather than their faith in the attainment of the American ideal.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES PROPOSE TO CAST OFF ALIEN INFLUENCE; TO FRUSTRATE AND REBUKE THE EFFORT OF THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION TO SUBSTITUTE ALIEN THINKING AND ALIEN GOVERNMENT FOR THE FREE INSTITUTIONS WHICH AMERICANS REVERE AND ARE DETERMINED TO RETAIN.

It was a convention which realized that neither man nor nation can find rest short of their highest convictions.

Those convictions, thank God, are now the accepted program of a national party, drawing to its ranks great numbers of HIGH-MINDED AMERICANS not hitherto numbered in its membership.

One witnessed in Cleveland the settled drift of a nation's conscience and instinct—the glow of a fervor that was religious in its intensity.

The American people apparently have made up their minds—not only their minds, but their hearts.

They are not interested in secondary questions, but have one fixed purpose in their hearts—to be unswervingly faithful to the America of their hope and belief.

Against a mighty people in such an exalted mood—no flattery, no cajolery, no bribery, no corruption, no devices of the politician or the demagogue can prevail.

The hour has struck for little men in high places, for puerile and conceited measures, for vain and weak administration.

The demand of the people, spoken in the accents of a firm insistence, is for SINCERE DEMOCRACY, PRUDENT STATESMANSHIP and a just regard for the NATION'S HONOR AND SAFETY—a demand which no Raw Deal and no Raw Dealer can meet, or—even face!

$11,000,000,000 Deficit

IF THE RESOURCES of this country, ACCUMULATED AND STORED UP BEFORE THE ROOSEVELT ERA, were not the most enormous in the world, the United States of America today, after three years of IMPERIALISTIC EXTRAVAGANCE under Roosevelt, would be BANKRUPT and our people reduced to the level of many Asiatic populations.

Here is the incredible balance sheet for three years, drawn by Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, from OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT FIGURES:

UP TO MAY 18, 1936, THE ADMINISTRATION HAD SPENT $22,541,245,376.

THE RECEIPTS FROM ALL SOURCES WERE $11,234,364,218!

That is, the government under which we are living, and which believes it is carrying on the BUSINESS of the people, has spent $2 FOR EVERY DOLLAR IT HAS TAKEN IN!

The accumulated DEFICIT since March 4, 1933, according to the Treasury's own books, is thus $11,306,881,158!

The colossal sum of $22,541,245,376 expended in three years does NOT include Federal loans of government money. It represents only the cash expenditures from the Treasury.

The running deficits for 1934-35 and for 1935-36 were HIGHER by many millions of dollars than the deficit of $3,286,012,362 that confronted Mr. Roosevelt in the first year of his administration.

MR. ROOSEVELT was elected on a platform that promised to wipe out the deficit, reduce the public debt and put the BUSINESS OF THE PEOPLE ON A PAYING BASIS.

Today the BASIS has become an ABYSM.

In Pittsburgh, on October 19, 1932, CANDIDATE Roosevelt had this to say about extravagance:

"OUR FEDERAL EXTRAVAGANCE BEARS A DOUBLE EVIL: FIRST, OUR PEOPLE AND OUR BUSINESS CANNOT CARRY ITS EXCESSIVE BURDENS OF TAXATION; SECOND, OUR CREDIT STRUCTURE IS IMPAIRED BY THE UNORTHODOX FEDERAL FINANCING MADE NECESSARY BY THE UNPRECEDENTED MAGNITUDE OF THESE DEFICITS."

If that was sound doctrine—and what sane man can doubt it?—in 1932, it is still sound doctrine in 1936.

The "double evil" of Federal extravagance that Mr. Roosevelt denounced in 1932 is here in 1936 in all its full measure BECAUSE OF HIS OWN POLICIES.

These two evils are "EXCESSIVE BURDENS OF TAXATION" and IMPAIRMENT OF CREDIT STRUCTURE.

THERE is today an ACTUAL DEFICIT, not of three thousand million dollars, but of ELEVEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS!

After three years of insane financing, boondoggling extravagance and the subsidizing of millions of persons for political purposes, the country finds itself threatened with still HIGHER TAXES, our exports have reached the VANISHING POINT, 12,000,000 persons are still out of work, and the impairment of our credit has reached such a point that business is still FROZEN WITH FEAR—fear of further Raw Deal raids on its surpluses, if not ACTUAL CONFISCATION OF ALL OF ITS PROFITS.

The factors that have saved this country from a debacle to the post-war condition of Germany and France are—

The reserve forces of RESISTANCE in the American character—

The ANTI-NEW DEAL decisions of the Supreme Court—

The immense treasures of property laid up by the COMPETITIVE SYSTEM OF A PEOPLE WHO HAVE FOUGHT REGIMENTATION AT EVERY STEP.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 22—Diary: Lay late after a night of fire wagon clanging and for a soda fountain snack, a strange breakfast of lettuce sandwich and chocolate ice cream soda. So home and a letter from Irvin Cobb bidding us to siesta on his broad Santa Monica porch awhile.

O. O. McIntyre

And a note from Alfred Vanderbilt offering to wager a dollar that a certain prediction of mine would not be realized. Then to walk on the avenue with my lady and we passed Gloria Vanderbilt and the widely publicized little Gloria and heard a rousing taxicab brawl, my favorite diversion.

To dinner at Sands Point with Paul and Margaret Whiteman. And Phyllis and Billy Seeman, too, and Ethel Roche. Back to the city where the dog met us at the door with a tiny mouse as proud of his kill as a mighty lion hunter. And found the usual Ed Wynn telegram when mentioned in a column: "Thanks."

Many believe the constant shrinking of milady's hat brought on the hallux fad especially among the debutantes. Although the oldsters are taking it up and many women shoppers on Fifth avenue are barehead. The craze has thrown a scare into milliners for the hatless mania fad cost millions and seems to show no signs of abatement. It takes only a handful of celebrities to start these switches in styles. Canes were dropped in the same fashion. A half dozen nifty dressers tired of walking sticks. Voila!

Broadway's most recent name for the chiseler is TERMITE.

Actors believe initials that spell a word are juju of great and lasting luck. Otto Kruger, for instance, is supposed to have the luckiest of all. They used to say O.K. and he always has a job. Jimmie Gleason has had a fortunate career. His spell play. The luckiest card player at one of the clubs for years was an actor whose initials spelt Win. So lucky, indeed, that eventually nobody would join a game in which he sat.

Personal nomination for the most consistent of the up-in-the-cloud ladies of the movies—Miriam Hopkins.

It's little wonder dog lovers are so apt to rave about their pets. A man just recovering from calamity was telling me of this solace today. Every owner has experienced one of those disquieting interludes when nothing seems right nor will ever be right again.

Not even Dempsey at the peak of his popularity is the target for more admiration along Broadway than the former New Orleans bootblack Tony Canzoneri. Since he last brave battle he has become the idol of the street. Night clubs would rather give him a ring side seat than almost any current notable in the shifting parade.

His symbolizes heart and courage to a district notoriously lacking these qualities. And with it all, his fist fits him still. A smiling gargoyle with a battered face and hallowed ears, he knows how to wear clothes in the Broadway flashy fashion.

Bagatelles: Carolyn Wells has written 56 mystery novels . . . Dwight Morrow always stopped a few moments to hear a burly-gurly tune . . . Reggie Vanderbilt asked Maury Paul to be present when he proposed to Gloria Morgan . . . Dean Cornwell is a dry cigarette smoker . . . The former German crown prince carries a vest pocket mirror . . . Ford Frick once wanted to be a big league bat boy and now looks . . . Henry Sell has danced an hour a day every week day for seven years.

The South American Peace Conference

By John B. Trevor

PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN COALITION

A League to ENFORCE peace is a league to make WAR!

An international court implies the assumptions of obligations to enforce its decrees!

Engagements to enforce peace and agreements to enforce the decrees of an international court are inseparable from war in future controversies, whose causes cannot be foreseen, and whose concern to the people of the UNITED STATES may be negligible.

With this introduction, TAKE NOTICE!

On January 30, Mr. Roosevelt wrote to the President of the Argentine Republic and to the presidents of all the other Latin American republics, suggesting that a peace conference be held in Buenos Aires "to consider their common need of rendering less likely in the future the outbreak or the continuation of hostilities between them, and by so doing serve in an eminently practical manner the cause of permanent peace on this western continent. . . . These steps, furthermore, would advance the cause of WORLD peace, inasmuch as the agreements which might be reached WOULD SUPPLEMENT AND REINFORCE THE EFFORTS OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND OF ALL OTHER EXISTING OR FUTURE PEACE AGENCIES IN SEEKING TO PREVENT WAR."

In a leading article published in the London Times of April 30, 1936, under a sub-title, "A COSMOPOLITAN," there is set forth the following comment upon the President of the United States:

THE BRITISH VIEW

"Mr. Roosevelt advocated American participation in the League of Nations when he 'ran' for the vice-presidency on the Democratic 'ticket' in 1920. A large part of his speech accepting his nomination as candidate was devoted to foreign relations. Either the United States must live as 'a hermit nation, dreaming of the past,' or we must open our eyes and see that modern civilization has become so complex . . . as to make it impossible to be in this world and out of it. We must see that it is impossible to avoid . . . those honorable and intimate foreign relations which the fearful-hearted shudderingly miscall by that devil's catchword, 'international complications.'

"It was not only loyalty to the then policy of the Democratic party which prompted Mr. Roosevelt to take that line. HIS UPBRINGING AND TRAINING HAVE GIVEN HIM A COSMOPOLITAN HORIZON. . . .

"SINCE HE HAS BEEN IN THE WHITE HOUSE, THE PRESIDENT HAS MADE SEVERAL EFFORTS AT INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION. THE SET OF HIS MIND IS INDICATED BY HIS ADVOCACY, UNSUCCESSFUL, IT IS TRUE, OF AMERICAN MEMBERSHIP OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT, AND BY HIS DESIRE, AGAIN UNFULFILLED, TO BE GIVEN A FREE HAND TO SUPPORT, IF HE SAW FIT, SANCTIONS AGAINST ITALY. . . . It was he who brought the United States into the International Labour Office at Geneva.

"One can feel confident that had Mr. Roosevelt been a European he would have been a supporter of the collective security system, AND THAT WERE HE A FREE AGENT, HE WOULD AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, BE READY TO CO-OPERATE TO A CONSIDERABLE EXTENT WITH THE DEMOCRACIES OF THE OLD WORLD IN THEIR EFFORTS TO OUTLAW WAR AND ORGANIZE PEACE. He allowed the Senate to defeat the American membership of the Hague Court" (World Court) "not out of indifference, but because he did not want to antagonize a body whose cooperation is essential to the New Deal. He gave in to the congressional opposition of safety-first neutrality in the Abyssinian war for the same reason, IN SPITE of the desire to aid the League indirectly which seems to be revealed by the appeal which he and Mr. Hull made to American traders last Autumn to add, so far as Italy was concerned, raw materials to the war supplies which the neutrality resolution of Congress forbade them to send to the belligerents."

It should be stated here that the President of the United States did not "allow" the Senate to defeat him over American membership of the World Court, but he was defeated by an outburst of public indignation at the effort to usher the United States into the League of Nations by the back door.

It is generally believed in well informed circles, that if the United States ratified the protocol of the World Court a controversy affecting our internal affairs would have been brought before that international tribunal as a result of which we would have been forced in self-defense to enter the League of Nations unconditional to protect our interests.

THE CANADIAN TRIP

It has been reported in the press that the President of the United States contemplates a visit to Canada this summer for the purpose of bringing Canada into the conference at Buenos Aires. In connection with this possibility, it may be well to remember, that not only is Canada a part of the British commonwealth of nations and her citizens subjects of the British crown, but also, that Great Britain and Canada are members of the League of Nations.

It should also be recalled that the great majority of the nations of Latin America are members of the League of Nations.

On April 24th, the Department of State issued a release to the press of an address by the Hon. Sumner Welle, assistant secretary of state, to be delivered before the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, at Baltimore, on April 25th.

In this address, which must be taken as an official statement of the viewpoint of our government, Mr. Welle reaffirms the statement of the President that—These steps, furthermore, would advance the cause of world peace, inasmuch as the agreements which might be reached would supplement and reinforce the efforts of the League of Nations and of all other existing or future peace agencies in seeking to prevent war."

UNLESS AMERICAN CITIZENS WISH OUR COUNTRY TO BECOME THE CATSPAW OF INTERNATIONAL INTRIGUE AND OUR SOLDIERS THE AGENTS OF INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATIONS, IT SHOULD BE THEIR FIRST BUSINESS TO DEMAND THAT ANY ADMINISTRATION WHICH MAY COME INTO POWER AS A RESULT OF THE NEXT PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION, DEFINITELY COMMIT ITSELF TO THE PROPOSITION, THAT OUR GOVERNMENT WILL RETAIN ITS INDEPENDENCE OF ACTION IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS.

The Terrorist Societies

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

This Black Legion which has been uncovered in the Mid-West is nothing new in American life. It seems that in every generation we must have a group of self - righteous individuals who feel that they are above the law and that it is their duty to see their neighbors live according to the way that they would point out for them. They may start off with the purest of motives, but always they wind up as criminal, murderous gangs.

Edwin C. Hill

The Black Legion recalls to me the black hand which for 55 years disfigured the wall of a cell in the jail at Mauch Chunk, Pennsylvania. The mark was left by a convicted member of the Black Legion of his day, an organization of cut-throats and terrorists which went by the name of the Molly Maguires.

The man was a miner, and the story went that as he was being dragged from his cell to the gallows, he wrenched his right hand free, rubbed it on the floor with coal dust and slapped it high on the wall, saying: "That mark is the handprint of an innocent man. It never can be washed away." It wasn't for more than half a century.

Then, in 1931, Sheriff Robert L. Bowman grew tired of the legend of the curious who would come to the jail to look on the hand in the cell of the Molly Maguire. "We'll have no more of the hand," said the sheriff, and with a penknife he cut out the plaster.

DOMINANT FOR YEARS

The Molly Maguires followed the same methods as the "mobs" which have grazed our own day. They began as a philanthropic society among miners in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields and then were notorious for 20 years for their outrages on mine owners. They became dominant in labor circles in the anthracite fields and in political circles as well. Assault and murder were commonplace, the mine bosses were terrorized, the police were helpless and it was worth a man's life to walk the streets of Mauch Chunk, Scranton or Wilkes-Barre after dark.

At last Franklin B. Gown, president of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad and Coal & Iron Company, determined to call in the Pinkertons, and they sent to him a young Irishman who had been running a saloon in Chicago until Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern to destroy the saloon and the rest of the city by fire. His name was James McParland.

SPRINGS THE TRAP!

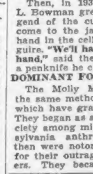
An old saloonkeeper himself, McParland wormed his way into the confidence of Pat Dormer, a Molly, who kept a saloon in Mauch Chunk. Slowly and carefully, for the least false step meant his life, McParland edged his way into the high council of the Mollies until he was made their secretary. The 20-year campaign of terrorism came to a climax in 1875 with the murder of a policeman and a mine boss. Thereupon McParland sprung the trap, rather he sprung 11 traps, for that was the number of the ringleaders of the Molly Maguires who went to the gallows in the space of a year.

Forty-five others went to prison, and the Molly Maguires were no more. James McParland was the J. Edgar Hoover of the 1870's. His work in Pennsylvania alone would have given him a place second to none in our detective annals. Yet he was to duplicate it in Idaho in 1906 when he broke up the reign of thuggery and assassination instituted by the "Inner Circle" of the Western Federation of Miners, which came to an end when McParland convicted Harry Orchard of the murder of the ex-Governor Steunenberg and got Orchard to implicate the miners' officials in 25 other murders.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I lay in the grass. It was not very tall grass, but lying there with my face pressed to the ground, it seemed as high as the forest and as filled with mystery and menace.



Elsie Robinson

Here were long, winding tunnels and secret dens and yawning pits. The pits were perhaps an inch deep and the winding tunnels were but faint shades between the tangled stems of weeds—but to them that they seemed as huge and terrible as any jungle. Among those tunnels monsters rambled and coiled—great, hairy spotted beasts—fanged serpents—winged carriers of death.

Tiny ants and spiders and inch worms they were in reality, but magnified to horrible importance by my nearness.

For long, sleepy moments I stared at these horrors as another bug might have stared. I had forgotten my normal, man-size world. I had forgotten the power and beauty of freedom which were my right as a man.

A CHANGED VIEW

Later, toward evening, I climbed a mountain. Not an easy climb. A narrow steep trail tangled in chaparral. But out and out—tumbled hills—deep ravines—small clearings set like golden tiles in the dark bronze of the forest. And over it all twilight flowed in a quiet, green tide.

And, somewhere, my little patch of grass lay under it—with its mimic dangers that had seemed so real. Far away from my bug's-eye view. All this lay below, but, from the mountain top my view was so wide that none of it clutched me. I know it was all there. I knew there was ugliness there as well as beauty—pain as well as joy—but they no longer filled my senses with their long importance.

THEY HAD GONE BACK TO THEIR NATURAL PLACE IN THE SCHEME OF THINGS. THEY WERE ALL OF A PIECE WITH THE REST OF THAT RESTING, STIRRING TWILIGHT HOUR OF LIFE.

A PLACE IN THE STARS

Then presently, the twilight deepened into amber—the deep ravines flowed with wine until all the land lay drenched in purple. And the sky which had been a brittle, white film opened.

And my mind opened—as the sky had opened. While I lay in the grass, with my face pressed close to the earth and darkness, I had seemed a part of that earth, bound by its dumb and helpless terror. But now, that I sat with the earth below me and my head in the stars, I felt that I, too, was an inhabitant of space—moving along a wide and endless trail.

And it came to me that life was like that. Just a matter of perspective. If one lay too close to the ground—too close to self—any trifle was a tragedy. BUT IF ONE CHOSE A MOUNTAIN—NO MATTER HOW HARD THE CLIMB—ONE ROSE ABOVE PAIN AND TOOK ONE'S PLACE IN THE STARS.
